Interest Rates To Be Lowered

LONDON (AP) — In an effort to ease the cost of borrowing for their businesses and people, finance ministers of five major Western nations agreed Sunday night to cooperate to lower interest rates.

Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, James Callaghan, called the two-day conference with his colleagues from the United States, France, West Germany and Italy in an effort to achieve "a measure of disarmament" in the competition for money.

The ministers issued a cautiously worded communique agreeing "within the limits of their respective responsibilities to cooperate in such a way as to enable interest rates in their respective countries to be lower than they would otherwise be."

No date was set for cuts in interest rates, but one delegate explained that at least there was an improvement in the atmosphere, which had come close to an international rate war.

"You know now that if you start doing something, the roof won't fall in," he said.

It is hoped that cooperative efforts to lower or stabilize the interest rates will halt the flow of money from one country to another in pursuit of higher rates and produce more and cheaper credit in the home countries.

U.S. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Fowler attended the meeting hoping to persuade Europeans to check inflation through taxes and budget cuts rather than with high interest rates.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank interest rate now is 4½ per cent — the highest in years — but U.S. rates cannot be reduced unless European rates are cut. Otherwise more dollars would leave the United States and the U.S. balance of payments would go deeper into the red.

Rhodes Firm About 1968

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes has taken himself out of the running as a Republican candidate for President or vice president in 1968.

"I will not be a candidate, that's right," he answered emphatically when the question was put to him at a news conference Sunday night.

Rhodes' name has been mentioned as a possible compromise candidate by neither Michigan Gov. George Romney nor former Vice President Richard Nixon make the grade at the 1968 GOP convention.

"We have no concern for any national office," Rhodes said when he was asked if he would consider running on a ticket headed by California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Rhodes said he would concentrate on solving problems in Ohio and that he considered his election as a contract with the people.

When asked if he would reconsider if either the nomination for President or vice president were offered him, he said, "I have no knowledge of any reconsideration."

The governor refused to comment on his preference for the GOP nomination for President.

"I have never placed myself in the position of a seer or analyst," he said when asked about the GOP's chances for victory in 1968.

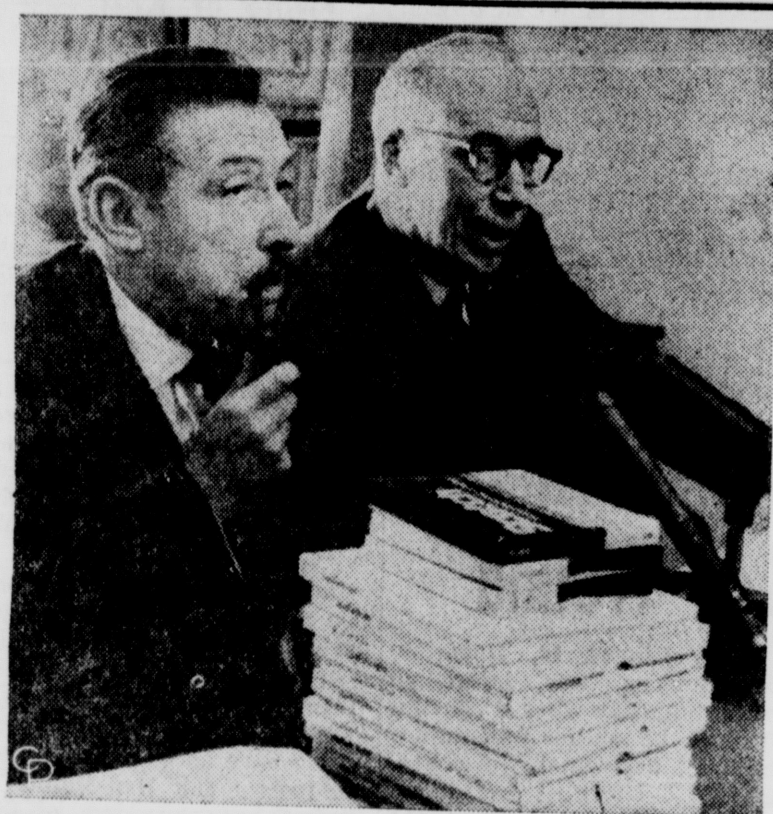

"Many things can happen in the next 18, 19 or 20 months," Rhodes said he would make a pitch for the Republican National Convention to be held in either Cleveland or Cincinnati.

He said he believed either city could meet the Republican National Committee's criteria for hotel and motel accommodations.

The governor was in New Orleans for a two-fold purpose: To attend the GOP National Committee meeting and to accept an award from the Society of Industrial Realtors naming Ohio's industrial development program as the best in the country.

Dow Jones, AP Sign Contract

NEW YORK (AP)—A major new venture in the international collection and distribution of economic news was announced today by The Associated Press and Dow Jones Company, Inc. The two organizations have signed a contract providing for formation of AP-Dow Jones Economic Report, a business and financial overseas news service that will make use of their respective resources throughout the world. The service will go into operation April 1, transmitting 24 hours daily on newly established land, cable and radio-teletype communications circuits to countries outside the United States and Canada.

CASH FOR TRADING STAMPS — Pipe-smoking Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N. Y., and Rep. Ken Hechler, D-W. Va., discuss in Washington their bill to require redemption of trading stamps in cash. On desk are tape recordings representing about 60 hours of testimony to ascertain need for such a law.

Ex-Actor Tom Conway Hopes To Make It Again

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Things are looking up for Tom Conway.

Conway, brother of actor George Sanders and once "The Falcon" in films and "Inspector Mark Sabre" on television, earned nearly $1 million in a 29-year, 290-film acting career.

He was found broke and living in a $2-a-day hotel room in a beatnik area of suburban Venice, Calif., in September 1965.

But today his health is better after four months in a county hospital and three months in a convalescent sanitarium for cirrhosis of the liver and general debilitation.

He has been on the wagon "completely" for nearly a year and finds "the old brain works better."

He's seeing his agent this week to see about getting parts again in movies, television and radio. His last was on TV's "Perry Mason" three years ago.

He has plans to manufacture "a couple of gimmicks I devised while lying in the hospital."

And he plans to develop a Baja California Gulf Coast resort, with local labor building abode cabanas and Conway serving as overseer and host between Hollywood roles.

"I've got a million things cooking," Conway said. "It will be more or less a cold start, but actingwise I think I'm at my peak."

Conway is 62, large-framed, still with great poise and quiet, jovial, British charm. Born in Russia to a Russian mother and a British father, he was educated in England.

Thatches of gray hair protrude above the frames of his thick-lensed spectacles, provided by the county after he had surgery for cataracts on both eyes.

He lives in a modern, $135-a-month, second-floor apartment next to a service station on Wilshire Boulevard. A long-time woman friend prepares his meals and does housework.

He draws a federal old-age benefit and has "a little other income," he declined to specify.

"I just scrape by," he said. Visited unexpectedly—he has no telephone—Conway was in blue jeans, carpet slippers, shirt and sweater. He dabbles in carpentry and plans for the future.

Time To Act On Ohio Time

Rural, City Views Differ

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Ohio's lawmakers return to work tonight with "time" on their hands—Both the question of uniform statewide time and an approaching deadline for getting two proposals on the May ballot.

House-Senate hearings are set to begin on bills that would exempt Ohio from the federal Uniform Time Act and another one to make its laws comply with the same act.

At stake is whether the state will remain on Eastern Standard Time the year around, as proposed in the first two measures, or switch to hour-fast Daylight Savings Time for the summer months as proposed in the third.

Under the federal act, Ohio will observe daylight time statewide effective the last Sunday in April unless it passes a law adopting standard time. It takes 90 days for a bill to become law after the governor signs it.

The question already has stirred a lot of controversy in the young session with battle lines drawn generally between farm groups favoring standard time and city dwellers who like daylight time.

Legislative leaders have withheld predictions on the matter although it would seem the metropolitan areas have the upper hand in the newly apportioned assembly where they have more representation.

Both ballot proposals are being readied by the administration of GOP Gov. James A. Rhodes who disclosed the second only last Friday at a news conference.

It would change the constitution to allow creation of an Ohio building authority which could invest funds without voter approval for capital improvements.

The other resolution to be offered by the administration would place the state's temporary reapportionment plan before voters asking their approval for use until after the 1970 census.

The two ballot proposals would require three-fifths votes in both houses before being filed with Secretary of State Ted W. Brown. He has a Feb. 16 deadline for prescribing to local election boards the form of the May 2 ballot.

Leaders indicated the legislature will put in a full four-days this week for the first time since the session convened Jan. 2. Sessions the first three weeks lasted only eight days.

Chinese Army To Be Used In Civil War

Anti-Maoists To Be Crushed, Declares Chou

TOKYO (AP) — Premier Chou En-lai reportedly committed Red China's 2.5-million-man army to crush Mao Tse-tung's opponents as news of revolt and resistance cracked out of the embattled mainland today from frozen Manchuria to Kwangtung in the south.

Japanese newsmen, quoting Peking wall posters, said Chou's announcement at a rally in Peking Sunday was the first statement by a top government official that troops would be used against Mao's foes.

The posters said Chou declared: "The People's Liberation Army is the most important tool of the dictatorship of the proletariat. It will resolutely suppress the handful of counter-revolutionary elements who are trying to destroy the proletarian great cultural revolution."

Japanese correspondents in Peking also reported purge chairman Chen Po-ta and Mao's wife, Chiang Ching, had ordered the people of the capital to establish a revolutionary city government composed of workers, peasants, soldiers, revolutionary students and teachers.

Quoting wall posters, the correspondents said 40 Maoists were injured, 10 captured and many were missing after a clash with students and workers supporting President Liu Shao-chi in the Manchurian industrial city of Chang Chun Jan. 21. The posters said the "reactionaries" were assembling a force of 60,000 persons from the Manchurian provinces of Kirin, Liaoning, (Continued on Page 2)

'Iron Triangle' Push Nears End

SAIGON (AP) — Operation Cedar Falls went into its third week today and a U.S. field commander said the allied drive through the "iron triangle" was reasonably successful in destroying a Viet Cong complex that has menaced Saigon for years.

U.S. forces reported the operation in the jungle and scrub territory 20 to 30 miles north of the capital resulted in an enemy toll of 1,219 killed, captured or surrendered. The allied troops also seized a record haul of 3,560 tons of Viet Cong rice, a spokesman said.

"We have certainly denied for a period of time a vast logistics complex and base area that the Viet Cong have enjoyed for 20 years," Lt. Gen. Jonathan O. Seaman told a Saigon news conference. He is commander of Field Force II.

Operation Cedar Falls involves between 25,000 and 30,000 U.S. and South Vietnamese troops.

Seaman indicated the operation is nearing an end. He said there is no intention of keeping U.S. soldiers in the 60-square mile area.

"We feel we have done a reasonably good job of destroying a VC complex," he said. U.S. jet bombers kept up their pounding of North Vietnam's Red River Delta and again tangled with Communist MIGs northwest of Hanoi in "MIG Valley."

Four U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs engaged an equal number of MIG17s Sunday and fired at least one air-to-air missile against the swept-wing Communist jets, the spokesman said. But the brief engagement ended with no damage to either side, he said.

Four American planes were shot down Saturday — three in North Vietnam and one in South Vietnam — and seven airmen were reported lost in the North and the South. Two Army helicopters also were shot down near Saigon Saturday, but damaged.

Board Names Committee on Airport Funds

A finance committee to study methods and means of securing money for a proposed airport here was appointed today by the Pickaway County Commissioners.

The commissioners named four area men to the panel. A fifth member is yet to be appointed.

Selected to serve on the committee were Robert Johnson, John Dunlap, Frank Bowling Jr. and J. Boyd Stout. Johnson was named chairman.

According to the commissioners, they tentatively plan to meet with the newly appointed group Friday afternoon.

THE COMMITTEE'S initial objective will center on finding possible ways of producing necessary revenue for the long-discussed project.

An approved airport program here would be eligible for $100,000 in state assistance. The county would be required to come up with any amount in excess of this figure, including the funds needed to purchase land.

In other business, the solons approved a motion requiring that future subdivision performance bonds must be by the principal party concerned and a bonding firm. No personal bonds will be accepted.

CLEVELAND (AP) — School maintenance employees in suburban Euclid voted Sunday to strike at midnight next Sunday if no agreement is reached with the board of education on salaries and fringe benefits.

Governor Gets Office Building Recommendations

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Gov. James A. Rhodes has received a report proposing three new state office buildings be constructed in downtown Columbus at a cost of $45 million.

The report, issued Saturday by Becker and Becker Associates, New York, said "Ohio is one of the fastest growing states in the nation" and the new buildings are needed to meet requirements of the state for the next nine years.

The governor said the buildings could be financed under a building authority proposal he's expected to present to the legislature this week.

The report recommended a new Statehouse annex building on the site of the present 67-year-old Statehouse annex which houses the Ohio Supreme Court and other offices.

The report also suggested a new commerce and industry building to house state departments dealing with promotion and regulation of commerce and industry, and a new building for health, education and welfare departments.

Military Experts Study Use of Armor in Battle

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP)—A team of Army experts from the United States is fanning out across Vietnam for a field study that may bring revolutionary changes in doctrine for use of armor in Vietnam-type wars.

About 75 officers are observing the employment of armored personnel carriers and tanks in country that many U.S. military men at one time considered unsuited for armor. Innovations tried out by American field commanders over the past year have been so successful that thinking has begun to change.

The experts will spend until March observing armor in action. Then they will report their findings to the Army's Combat Developments Command at Fort Belvoir, Va.

This could result in changes, including an increase in the number of armored personnel carriers and tanks for units tailored for operations in rugged, road-short terrain like that of Southeast Asia and other underdeveloped regions.

Okay Sought On Minimum $70 Monthly

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson asked Congress today to raise Social Security benefits by 15 per cent and 50 per cent in the lowest bracket and said such an increase will be "a major step toward our goal that every elderly citizen has an adequate income and a meaningful retirement."

Johnson's proposal, which he said would guarantee minimum benefits of $70 a month for individuals and $105 a month for married couples, also includes a recommendation for increased Social Security taxes, both by raising the taxable base and by increasing rates.

The President asked Congress to increase the amount of annual income on which taxes are collected to $7,800 next year, $9,000 in 1971, and $10,800 in 1974.

He also asked Congress to revise rate increased already scheduled, going from 4.4 to 4.5 per cent in 1969 and from 4.85 per cent in 1973 to 5 per cent.

The same increases would apply to the levy on employers, who match what employees put in.

The biggest increase in benefits — 50 per cent — would apply only in the lowest bracket to raise the individual minimum from $44 to $70. From that the rise would graduate downward to at least 15 per cent for those eligible for maximum benefits.

Johnson recommended that the amount Social Security recipients can earn without losing trip benefits be increased to $1,680 a year and that the amount above that for which a beneficiary can retain $1 in payments for each $2 in earnings be increased to $2,880.

The increased benefits had been sketched in broad outline in Johnson's State of the Union message.

He called in the earlier communication for the rise from $44 to $70 in minimum benefits, and a guarantee of $100 a month for persons with 25 years or more of coverage.

The State of the Union message did not go into the tax increase to pay for the increased benefits.

The proposed increase in Social Security taxes would increase the maximum amount paid by an individual to $343.20 in 1968 and to $390 in 1969.

Johnson had announced earlier that his proposals would cost $4.1 billion during the first year. The tax rise is expected to come under fire in Congress, especially from Republicans who have urged an 8 per cent increase plus a cost-of-living escalator clause without raising taxes.

Ohio Weather May Be Fine Till Midweek

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Ohio's June-in-January weather should prevail at least through the middle of the week, the U.S. Weather Bureau in Columbus reports.

Record high temperatures for Jan. 23 were in sight as readings inched near and past the 60-degree mark around the state Monday morning.

Sunday night was one of the warmest January nights on record, with low temperatures mostly in the 50s.

Howard Kenny, chief weatherman at Columbus, said clouds and rain in the forecast Monday and Tuesday might cheat the state of any 70-degree readings.

A storm that inundated large sections of the West Coast with rain, snow and mud, moved across the Rockies into the north central Plains today. Thick fog slowed air and land travel in the Midwest.

The storm — moving rapidly toward the Great Lakes — is followed by a surge of bitterly cold arctic air, guaranteeing a sudden end to springlike temperatures that had warmed many parts of the nation's northern half.

The second day of fog shrouded most of the Midwest from Texas to the Canadian border. Zero visibilities were reported at Rochester and Duluth, Minn.

The fog caused airport delays and cancellation of flights in areas throughout the Midwest.

He called in the earlier communication for the rise from $44 to $70 in minimum benefits, and a guarantee of $100 a month for persons with 25 years or more of coverage.

The State of the Union message did not go into the tax increase to pay for the increased benefits.

The proposed increase in Social Security taxes would increase the maximum amount paid by an individual to $343.20 in 1968 and to $390 in 1969.

Johnson had announced earlier that his proposals would cost $4.1 billion during the first year. The tax rise is expected to come under fire in Congress, especially from Republicans who have urged an 8 per cent increase plus a cost-of-living escalator clause without raising taxes.

The maximum increases under the President's proposals

Police Solve 2 Burglaries

Daniel Baughman, 31, Ashville, was charged today by Circleville Police with two counts of burglary, grand larceny and petit larceny.

Sgt. Roderick List said Baughman had in his possession tools and merchandise taken in a burglary of the Joe Moats Motor Sales Dec. 31 and an entry at the Bonded Oil Station on Jan. 13.

Baughman allegedly has admitted to being involved in both burglaries. All the items taken, with the exception of two 2-gallon cans of oil, were recovered.

In addition, police recovered articles that the owners of the two businesses did not realize had been taken.

Assisting Sgt. List with the investigation and the apprehension of Baughman was Patrolman Larry Pontious.

Dental Effort At Ashville Is Completed

A report of the dental health education program recently conducted at Ashville Elementary School has been completed by James P. Henahan, DDS, of the State Department of Health.

Dr. Henahan conducted the program with 93 second grade pupils. There were 367 dental defects noted in the pupils. A total of 263 of the defects were in primary teeth and 104 in permanent teeth. Sixty of the children were referred for treatment by their family dentist.

There were an average of 6.21 defects per child. In 15 children, there were no discernible defects.

The second grade students had 119 fillings, of which 94 were in primary teeth and 25 in permanent teeth.

Of 61 schools in which Dr. Henahan has conducted his program, Ashville ranks 31st in average number of defects per child.

A similar program will be conducted with second grade pupils at Darby Elementary School, Pickaway County Superintendent of Schools George D. McDowell noted today.

Court Rules 2 N.Y. Laws Illegal

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court threw out today a Communist party membership New York law which makes grounds for dismissal of state university and colleges teachers.

The high court also declared unconstitutional a 1917 New York law which made "the utterance of any treasonable or seditious word or words or the doing of any treasonable or seditious act" ground for dismissal from the public school system.

The court split along liberal-conservative lines as it issued its ruling by a 5-4 vote.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr. wrote the controlling ruling. Voting with him to form a majority were Chief Justice Earl Warren and Associate Justices Hugo L. Black, William O. Douglas and Abe Fortas. Dissenting were Justices Tom C. Clark, John M. Harlan, Potter Stewart and Byron R. White.

The New York provisions were found by the majority to be unconstitutionally vague and also an unconstitutional intrusion into the express of belief.

Brennan said there can be no doubt New York has a legitimate interest in protecting its education system from subversion. But he said, quoting an earlier Supreme Court decision, "even though the governmental purpose be legitimate and substantial, that purpose cannot be pursued by means that broadly stifle fundamental personal liberties when the end can be more narrowly achieved."

Free speech, guaranteed by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, needs breathing space to survive, Brennan said, and government may regulate in the area only with narrow specificity.

"New York's complicated and intricate scheme plainly violates that standard," Brennan said.

Speaking for the four dissenters, Clark said the majority "has by its broadside swept away one of our most precious rights, the right of self-preservation."

Today is Monday, Jan. 23, the 23rd day of 1967. There are 342 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1845, the first uniform election day was established as the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

On this date
In 1737, John Hancock, a signer of the Declaration of Independence was born.

In 1932, Franklin D. Roosevelt put his hat in the ring for the Democratic party's presidential nomination.

In 1942, Japanese troops invaded the southwest Pacific islands of New Guinea and New Britain.

In 1943, the British 8th Army entered Tripoli.

In 1946, the British Labor party refused the request of the British Communist party for affiliation.

Ten years ago — President Dwight D. Eisenhower, in his annual economic report to Congress, said the nation's output of goods and services in 1956 reached a record $412 billion.

Five years ago—The merger of American Airlines and Eastern Airlines into the world's biggest airways system in assets and revenues was approved by the directors of the two companies. The approval of stockholders of both companies and that of the Civil Aeronautics Board, however, were required before the merger could take place.

Firemen Called Three Times During Weekend

The Circleville Fire Department answered three calls during the weekend. One of the summons turned out to be a false alarm.

Firemen said the false alarm came at 10:45 p. m. when a youthful sounding voice reported there was a car on fire at the service station at Main and Scioto Sts.

At 8:35 p. m. Saturday, Circleville Police called firefighters to 121 S. Scioto St. where a trash fire was burning near a garage.

At 6:07 a. m. today, firemen rushed to 357 E. Ohio St. where a car driven by Barbara Burgoon of 215 W. Mount St. burst into flames and ignited the engine. Damage was estimated at $25.

School Entry Probed by Sheriff's Staff

The Pickaway County Sheriff's Department is investigating a weekend entry at Westfall School.

Nothing was taken, although entry was gained into the school district clerk's office.

No money is kept in the safe in the office, according to Jud Lanman, executive head of the district. The safe is left open, he said.

Office equipment and radios in the office were not disturbed. Deputy Sheriff James Lockard said entry was gained by removing a window on the south-west corner of the building.

U.S.-Soviet

critical questioning from both hard line and soft line foreign policy advocates.

In advance of the Foreign Relations Committee session, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said he hopes the committee will act "on the merits of the convention" and not be swayed by a mail campaign mounted by conservative groups opposing the agreement.

The committee approved the convention regulating U.S.-Soviet consular affairs in 1965. But Mansfield said in an interview that he held up Senate action "on my own responsibility" in the last Congress.

Mansfield said he had been concerned that any chance for the Soviet Union to bring the Vietnam war to the negotiating table "would be dashed if the debate became too bitter."

But he acknowledged that it was doubtful the measure could have won the two-thirds approval required for the Senate to give its consent.

Results of the consular debate may indicate how receptive the Senate is this year to other administration attempts to build bridges to the East, such as the recently signed space treaty and proposals for increasing trade with the Soviet bloc.

The State Department released Friday the text of letters exchanged last fall between Rusk and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. The Hoover letter, although carefully worded, appeared to indicate that he no longer opposes the consular convention.

When Hoover testified before a House committee in 1965, he said the agreement could make the FBI's work more difficult in dealing with spies and saboteurs.

Many critics of the convention, which includes a controversial provision granting diplomatic immunity to consular officials, pointed to Hoover's earlier objections as reasons for opposing the agreement.

On the theory that "peace is bullish," stocks were bought on a broad front.

The market rose from the start, reached a peak late in the morning then backed away from its best level.

Students Eye Action in UC Crisis

Firing of Kerr By Regent Board Sparks Protest

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Staggered by the surprise firing of President Clark Kerr of the University of California, leaders of 87,000 students on nine UC campuses planned mass meetings today to decide student action in the crisis. Also, the quest begins for Kerr's successor.

The Board of Regents, by a 14-to-8 vote, last Friday ended the 8 1/2-year career of Kerr as president of the nation's biggest university system. Gov. Ronald Reagan, an ex-officio regent, voted against Kerr, 55.

Reagan said during his election campaign that Kerr permitted campus political activity in behalf of Reagan's Democratic opponent, then Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

"We have no plans for a protest today," said Dan McIntosh, student body president of the Berkeley campus, largest of the UC system.

McIntosh said he would call for a discussion of the Kerr ouster, along with Reagan's controversial proposals to charge tuition and cut the UC budget, both of which Kerr had pledged to fight.

At two campuses in Southern California there was talk of classroom boycotts to protest the firing of Kerr.

At Santa Barbara, student body president Jeff Jeffcoat urged organization of a university-wide boycott. And at Irvine, Dave Altschuler said his student group was pushing for an immediate one-day strike today.

Should protests of this kind materialize, it would be the first time in two demonstration-wracked years that Kerr would hear militant student support of himself. He has come under fire for the demonstrations that have hit Berkeley, and some believe this unrest contributed to the regents' decision to fire him.

Most of the student leaders appeared to take McIntosh's discussion-first view.

In a message addressed to regents over the weekend, 81 Berkeley professors said: "The nature and timing of the action taken Friday seem to give evidence of an attempt to exert political influence over the university."

"This cannot be tolerated from either the right or the left of the political spectrum."

"We call on regents to demonstrate that their action did not result from political pressures coming from the state administration in Sacramento."

Regents must knuckle down immediately toward choosing a new president. Faculty members, who will have their meeting Tuesday, hope to exercise strong influence in the choice.

Mrs. Edward H. Heller, a regent who voted against the dismissal, said with reference to the abruptness of the act: "It seems obvious to me we're not going to get a president of stature very quickly, no matter how much advice we get. It's going to take some time."

Two Admitted To Hospital After Mishap

Two Williamsport area persons were admitted to Berger Hospital Saturday afternoon following an accident at Routes 104 and 22.

Dane Russell, 6, and Lawrence Wing, 63, both passengers in a car driven by Dale Russell, 29, Williamsport, were admitted for treatment of lacerations, abrasions and other injuries.

Deputy Sheriff Warren Straley was told that a car driven by Robert Dale Kinney, 18, of Powell, northbound on Route 104, stopped at the intersection and then pulled into the path of the auto operated by Russell.

Damage to both vehicles was heavy, Straley said.

Kinney was cited to appear in Circleville Municipal Court for failure to yield the right of way.

and Heilunkiang to give battle to "revolutionary rebels" converging on Chang Chun.

Chinese arriving in Hong Kong from Kwangtung said Mao's opponents there had been encouraged by reports that an anti-Mao army of peasants, had seized control of much of neighboring Kiangsi Province.

Western sources in Hong Kong said there were strong indications of sharply increased opposition to Mao in some areas of Kwangtung but cautioned that the reported "army" probably was no more than a group of Mao's opponents armed with clubs and hand weapons fashioned from farm and factory tools.

The arrivals from Canton also reported continued fighting between anti-Mao and pro-Mao forces in Kiangsi Province and the arrest or capture of some anti-Mao leaders in Nanchang, provincial capital of Kiangsi.

They said the Kiangsi news had been received in Canton via radio broadcasts from Nanchang Sunday night.

The government radio in Kiangsi, where Mao organized some of China's earliest Communist uprisings 40 years ago, said Sunday that Mao's enemies have won control over much of the province after violent clashes in which a number of persons were hurt. The broadcast demanded the "instant arrest" of what it called an army of anti-Maoists but admitted that police and regular army units were not obeying the order.

Peking's official New China News Agency, quoting the Communist party newspaper Peking People's Daily, said party chairman Mao's five-month-old purge of his foes was meeting "strong, unprecedented resistance."

Ford Foundation Will Aid WCET

NEW YORK (AP)—The Ford Foundation Sunday promised $30,000 to television station WCET, Cincinnati, Ohio if the station can raise $100,000 in cash or pledges by Feb. 8.

WCET, established in 1954, is the country's first educational television station. Loss of a school-fund proposition in the November elections has cut its income by $117,000—a third of its budget. The station was preparing last week to shut down.

would go to 2.5 million persons now receiving minimum benefits of $44 a month for an individual. But Johnson said increases of at least 15 per cent would go to the other 20.5 million beneficiaries. The monthly minimum benefit for a retired couple with 25 years coverage would be raised to $150, while individuals in this category would get at least $100 a month.

In addition to the Social Security increases, Johnson proposed legislation to upgrade state welfare laws, to simplify and reduce taxes for older Americans, to bring 1.5 million disabled Americans under 65 into medicare, and to enact federal legislation banning discrimination in employment because of age.

He urged that state welfare agencies be required to raise cash payments to welfare recipients to the level the state itself sets as the subsistence minimum, that this subsistence standard be no less than two-thirds the level set for medical assistance, and that state welfare programs be required to establish a work-incentive provision for old age recipients.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has already said he will hold hearings on the President's proposal to raise Social Security benefits before consideration of Johnson's recommendation for a 6 per cent surcharge on income taxes.

House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford said in outlining the GOP congressional program last week that Social Security benefits should be increased 8 per cent and that future increases should be pegged to rises in the cost of living.

The GOP leader said this could be done without an increase in Social Security taxes. While conceding this is so, Social Security officials say the result would be to freeze the present structure of Social Security by committing funds that would otherwise be available for expanded coverage for use in paying cost-of-living increases.

Court Rules 2 N.Y. Laws Illegitimate

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court threw out today a Communist party membership New York law which makes grounds for dismissal of state university and colleges teachers.

The high court also declared unconstitutional a 1917 New York law which made "the utterance of any treasonable or seditious word or words or the doing of any treasonable or seditious act" ground for dismissal from the public school system.

The court split along liberal-conservative lines as it issued its ruling by a 5-4 vote.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr. wrote the controlling ruling. Voting with him to form a majority were Chief Justice Earl Warren and Associate Justices Hugo L. Black, William O. Douglas and Abe Fortas. Dissenting were Justices Tom C. Clark, John M. Harlan, Potter Stewart and Byron R. White.

The New York provisions were found by the majority to be unconstitutional vague and also an unconstitutional intrusion into the express of beliefs.

Brennan said there can be no doubt New York has a legitimate interest in protecting its education system from subversion. But he said, quoting an earlier Supreme Court decision, "even though the governmental purpose be legitimate and substantial, that purpose cannot be pursued by means that broadly stifle fundamental personal liberties when the end can be more narrowly achieved."

Free speech, guaranteed by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, needs breathing space to survive, Brennan said, and government may regulate in the area only with narrow specificity.

"New York's complicated and intricate scheme plainly violates that standard," Brennan said.

Speaking for the four dissenters, Clark said the majority "has by its broadside swept away one of our most precious rights, the right of self-preservation."

Today is Monday, Jan. 23, the 23rd day of 1967. There are 342 days left in the year.

In 1932, Franklin D. Roosevelt put his hat in the ring for the Democratic party's presidential nomination.

In 1942, Japanese troops invaded the southwest Pacific islands of New Guinea and New Britain.

In 1943, the British 8th Army entered Tripoli.

In 1946, the British Labor party refused the request of the British Communist party for affiliation.

Five years ago—The merger of American Airlines and Eastern Airlines into the world's biggest airways system in assets and revenues was approved by the directors of the two companies. The approval of stockholders of both companies and that of the Civil Aeronautics Board, however, were required before the merger could take place.

Firemen Called Three Times During Weekend

The Circleville Fire Department answered three calls during the weekend. One of the summons turned out to be a false alarm.

Firemen said the false alarm came at 10:45 p. m. when a youthful sounding voice reported there was a car on fire at the service station at Main and Scioto Sts.

At 8:35 p. m. Saturday, Circleville Police called firefighters to 121 S. Scioto St. where a trash fire was burning near a garage.

At 6:07 a. m. today, firemen rushed to 537 E. Ohio St. where a car driven by Barbara Burgoon of 215 W. Mount St., backfired and ignited the engine. Damage was estimated at $25.

School Entry Probed by Sheriff's Staff

The Pickaway County Sheriff's Department is investigating a weekend entry at Westfall School.

Nothing was taken, although entry was gained into the school district clerk's office.

No money is kept in the safe in the office, according to Jud Lanman, executive head of the district. The safe is left open, he said.

Office equipment and radios in the office were not disturbed. Deputy Sheriff James Lockard said entry was gained by removing a window on the southwest corner of the building.

critical questioning from both hard line and soft line foreign policy advocates.

In advance of the Foreign Relations Committee session, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said he hopes the committee will act "on the merits of the convention" and not be swayed by a mail campaign mounted by conservative groups opposing the agreement.

The committee approved the convention regulating U.S.-Soviet consular affairs in 1965. But Mansfield said in an interview that he held up Senate action "on my own responsibility" in the last Congress.

Mansfield said he had been concerned then that any chance for the Soviet Union to bring the Vietnam war to the negotiating table "would be dashed if the debate became too bitter."

But he acknowledged that it was doubtful the measure could have won the two-thirds approval required for the Senate to give its consent.

Results of the consular debate may indicate how receptive the Senate is this year to other administration attempts to build bridges to the East, such as the recently signed space treaty and proposals for increasing trade with the Soviet bloc.

The State Department released Friday the text of letters exchanged last fall between Rusk and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. The Hoover letter, although carefully worded, appeared to indicate that he no longer opposes the consular convention.

When Hoover testified before a House committee in 1965, he said the agreement could make the FBI's work more difficult in dealing with spies and saboteurs.

Many critics of the convention, which includes a controversial provision granting diplomatic immunity to consular officials, pointed to Hoover's earlier objections as reasons for opposing the agreement.

The total number of planes reported lost in the air war against North Vietnam rose to 463.

Ground fighting in South Vietnam continued on a relatively small scale, with U. S. military headquarters reporting 98 Communist soldiers killed Sunday in scattered skirmishes in three sectors. The South Vietnamese command reported 20 enemy dead in five small clashes.

U. S. headquarters disclosed that a Vietnamese hamlet was hit by error in a shelling by the 7th Fleet destroyer Norris on Saturday. Headquarters said four Vietnamese civilians were killed and nine wounded in the bombardment, the first reported shelling of a wrong target by a Navy vessel in the Vietnam war.

In a delayed report, the U. S. command said that two other 7th fleet destroyers, the Stoddard and the Keppeler, destroyed or damaged a radar site, seven cargo boats and two guns in a shore battery around the Vinh area in North Vietnam last Thursday.

B52 bombers made two raids during the night. One wave hit at trench positions in the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam. Another formation struck at suspected troop concentrations 26 miles south of Saigon at dawn.

American pilots flew 66 missions over North Vietnam Sunday, and U. S. spokesmen said the northeast monsoon was beginning to return after letting up for the past week.

On the theory that "peace is bullish," stocks were bought on a broad front.

The market rose from the start, reached a peak late in the morning then backed away from its best level.

Students Eye Action in UC Crisis

Firing of Kerr By Regent Board Sparks Protest

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Staggered by the surprise firing of President Clark Kerr of the University of California, leaders of 87,000 students on nine UC campuses planned mass meetings today to decide student action in the crisis. Also, the quest begins for Kerr's successor.

The Board of Regents, by a 14-to-8 vote, last Friday ended the 84-year career of Kerr as president of the nation's biggest university system. Gov. Ronald Reagan, an ex-officio regent, voted against Kerr, 55.

Reagan said during his election campaign that Kerr permitted campus political activity in behalf of Political Action Committee, then Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

"We have no plans for a protest today," said Dan McIntosh, student body president of the Berkeley campus, largest of the UC system.

McIntosh said he would call for a discussion of the Kerr ouster, along with Reagan's controversial proposals to charge tuition and cut the UC budget, both of which Kerr had pledged to fight.

At two campuses in Southern California there was talk of classroom boycotts to protest the firing of Kerr.

At Santa Barbara, student body president Jeff Joffcoat urged organization of a university-wide boycott. And at Irvine, Dave Altschuler said his student group was pushing for an immediate one-day strike today.

Should protests of this kind materialize, it would be the first time in two demonstration-wracked years that Kerr would hear militant student support of himself. He has come under fire for the demonstrations that have hit Berkeley, and some believe this unrest contributed to the regents' decision to fire him.

Most of the student leaders appeared to take McIntosh's discussion-first view.

In a message addressed to regents over the weekend, 51 Berkeley professors said: "The nature and timing of the action taken Friday seem to give evidence of an attempt to exert political influence over the university."

"This cannot be tolerated from either the right or the left of the political spectrum."

"We call on regents to demonstrate that their action did not result from political pressures coming from the state administration in Sacramento."

Regents must knuckle down immediately toward choosing a new president. Faculty members, who will have their meeting Tuesday, hope to exercise strong influence in the choice.

Mrs. Edward H. Heller, a regent who voted against the dismissal, said with reference to the abruptness of the act: "It seems obvious to me we're not going to get a president of stature very quickly, no matter how much advice we get. It's going to take some time."

Two Admitted To Hospital After Mishap

Two Williamsport area persons were admitted to Berger Hospital Saturday afternoon following an accident at Routes 104 and 22.

Dane Russell, 6, and Lawrence Wing, 63, both passengers in a car driven by Dale Russell, 29, Williamsport, were admitted for treatment of lacerations abrasions and other injuries.

Deputy Sheriff Warren Straley was told that a car driven by Robert Dale Kinney, 18, of Powell, northbound on Route 104, stopped at the intersection and then pulled into the path of the auto operated by Russell.

Damage to both vehicles was heavy, Straley said.

Kinney was cited to appear in Circleville Municipal Court for failure to yield the right of way.

Chinese arriving in Hong Kong from Kwangtung said Mao's opponents there had been encouraged by reports that an anti-Mao army of peasants, had seized control of much of neighboring Kiangsi Province.

Western sources in Hong Kong said there were strong indications of sharply increased opposition to Mao in some areas of Kwangtung but cautioned that the reported "army" probably was no more than a group of Mao's opponents armed with clubs and hand weapons fashioned from farm and factory tools.

The arrivals from Canton also reported continued fighting between anti-Mao and pro-Mao forces in Kiangsi Province and the arrest or capture of some anti-Mao leaders in Nanchang, provincial capital of Kiangsi.

They said the Kiangsi news had been received in Canton via radio broadcasts from Nanchang Sunday night.

The government radio in Kiangsi, where Mao organized some of China's earliest Communist uprisings 40 years ago, said Sunday that Mao's enemies have won control over much of the province after violent clashes in which a number of persons were hurt. The broadcast demanded the "instant arrest" of what it called an army of anti-Maoists but admitted that police and regular army units were not obeying the order.

Peking's official New China News Agency, quoting the Communist party newspaper Peking People's Daily, said Peking chairman Mao's five-month-old purge of his foes was meeting "strong, unprecedented resistance."

The GOP leader said this could be done without an increase in Social Security taxes.

While conceding this is so, Social Security officials say the result would be to freeze the present structure of Social Security by committing funds that would otherwise be available for expanded coverage for use in paying cost-of-living increases.

Ousted Berkeley President Reviews His Stormy Career

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — "During 14½ years, I have fought many battles, a great many more than ever met the public eye," said Clark Kerr last weekend after being fired as president of the world's largest university. "I won a great many of those battles."

The soft-spoken educator did not elaborate, but the high points of his career as head of the University of California already were history.

Most of the headlines sprang from the flagship Berkeley campus, largest in the nine-campus system, where loyalty oaths, free speech, filthy speech and finally a Navy recruiting table occupied the spotlight.

In Kerr's administration the Berkeley campus became battleground for some of the most controversial social and political issues of the day, as well as an esteemed educational and scientific center.

In 1952, Kerr was named the first chancellor on the Berkeley campus—a selection that was made as a move to heal the breach between the regents and the faculty over a loyalty oath dispute.

During the dispute Kerr was chairman of the Academic Senate Committee on Privilege and Tenure that strongly recommended the retention of the faculty members who refused to sign the controversial oath.

The State Supreme Court later declared the oath unconstitutional.

In 1958, Kerr succeeded Robert Gordon Sproul as president of the university.

In the years that followed, communism remained a top of dispute at Berkeley, but even more explosive issues began to emerge.

During the Republican National Convention in San Francisco in July 1964, supporters of then Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, complained that followers of Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania, were recruiting political workers on the Berkeley campus in violation of university rules.

That fall, university officials announced that long-standing rules against political recruiting and fund-raising "mounting political and social action" on the campus would henceforth be enforced.

The enforcement move led to a series of confrontations between the university and young activists led by a philosophy student from New York named Mario Savio. The group called itself the Free Speech Movement.

Discussions between the FSM and the university bogged down and finally collapsed. On Dec. 2, 1964, Savio led about 1,000 persons, including some 100 nonstudents, into Sproul Hall, the Berkeley administration building, for an all-night protest sit-in.

At this point Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown stepped in and ordered the demonstrators arrested. Highway patrolmen, sheriff's deputies and police officers were sent to the campus and more than 800 limp demonstrators were hauled away and arrested. Many of their cases are still on appeal in the courts.

"We fumbled, we floundered, and the worst thing is I still don't know how we should have handled it," Kerr later said of the Sproul Hall episode. "At any other university the administrators wouldn't have known how to handle it any better."

Berkeley campus Chancellor Edward Strong, who was given the choice of taking terminal leave or being fired following the Sproul Hall crisis, charged that Kerr had brought on the trouble by vacillation and capitulation to the rebel students.

Some regents were increasing pressure on Kerr to clamp down on student and nonstudent rule-breakers at the campus. And John Thomson was thinking of a few rule to break.

Thomson, a shaggy-haired, barefoot nonstudent, entered the campus March 3, 1965, with a large sign bearing a single obscene word. He was arrested, but next day a group of young persons paraded with signs bearing the same four-letter word. Police arrested nine of them, including three students.

Kerr, who referred to the controversy as the "filthy speech movement," tried to delegate the matter to a faculty committee, but the committee disclaimed jurisdiction.

On March 9, 1965, Kerr and Acting Chancellor Martin Meyerson announced that they were resigning. Kerr said he was "joining this dramatic step against my inclination" to avoid a new confrontation over the obscenity issue.

Four days later, after receiving strong support from the faculty and after an emergency meeting of the regents, Kerr and Meyerson withdrew their resignations.

Meyerson later stepped down as chancellor and was replaced by Roger Heyns of the University of Michigan.

Republican Ronald Reagan made the activities on the campus and in the surrounding non-student "underground" community a major issue in his campaign for governor against Gov. Brown. Less than a month after Reagan's election there was a new disturbance at the campus, this time in the Student Union Building basement where the university had authorized a Navy recruiting table.

On Nov. 10 a group of peace demonstrators attempted to set up a rival table, but were denied permission. A sit-in followed and nine persons were arrested, including Savio, now a nonstudent who had been denied readmission to the university for applying too late.

A student strike committee was formed, but an attempted boycott of classes petered out when the regents threatened to fire any teaching assistants taking part in the boycott.

After taking office as governor, Reagan called for a 10 per cent slash in the state budget, including the university and state college systems, in a move to wipe out sizeable anticipated deficit. Reagan also asked for a study of the possibility of charging tuition, something opposed by Kerr.

Kerr responded by ordering a freeze on admissions, contending more money, not less, was needed if new students were to be admitted to the university. He was joined in this move by Chancellor Glenn Dumke of the separate state college system.

Reagan, obviously angry, charged that the freeze order was unnecessary and made it a point to attend the meeting of the regents Thursday and Friday in Berkeley.

Reagan, an ex-office member of the Board of Regents, was among those voting for Kerr's dismissal.

Speaking to newsmen after the vote Friday, Kerr said he assumed he still has a professorship in the university School of Business and Public Administration and that he was considering returning to teaching. Asked why, he replied, "Well, I love the University of California."

Will and Ariel Durant Finish 10-Volume Work

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — After a half century of devoted labor, Will and Ariel Durant have finished their 10-volume "The Story of Civilization."

What are they doing now? The same thing they have done during their long life together: researching and writing.

The Durants live only a mile from Hollywood and Vine, but they lead a monastic existence removed from the outer world. Their routine hasn't changed since completion of their magnum opus. They still spend their days in solitary reading and composition, then exchange ideas in the evening.

"But we're glad that the big work is over—glad that we were able to finish it while we were still sane and not doddering idiots," reported Mrs. Durant.

"The last book is 'Rousseau and Revolution,' and it will be out this fall. It carries up to the fall of the Bastille, and that is as far as we go. Will is 81, and we don't believe we should write in our dotage."

The Durants finished "Rousseau and Revolution" in late summer, ending it with a salute to their readers. "After all," said Mrs. Durant, "the unseen but ever-present audience has stuck by us all this time, so we felt we should thank them for their many years of fidelity."

They delivered the manuscript to Simon and Schuster in New York and then departed on a "farewell tour" of Europe.

"It was our first trip since 1912 on which we did not have to devote ourselves to research," said Mrs. Durant.

"We were able to go from country to country saying farewell to the many friends who have helped our work over the years."

When the Durants returned to Hollywood, they found the habits of their lifetime could not be altered, and they plunged once more into intellectual endeavor. At present they are working on a small volume to be called "The Lessons of History," in which they will detail what they have learned from their study of civilization.

"Then we plan to undertake a dual autobiography," Mrs. Durant said, adding wryly, "of course, we are dreaming that we will live as long as Methuselah."

22 Weekend Deaths From Ohio Traffic

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At least 22 persons lost their lives in Ohio traffic accidents between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday—the worst weekend death toll of 1967.

The deaths equaled the number killed over the 78-hour New Year's weekend, but that included the last few hours of 1966.

Steel Keeps Near Record Pace

CLEVELAND (AP)—Cutbacks in the production of automobiles and appliances have not kept steel consumption from continuing at a near record pace, Steel Magazine reported today.

The weekly journal of metalworking said most other markets are as strong as they were early last year, the exceptions being rail transportation and residential housing.

"But prospects for residential construction are improving," the magazine added. "Housing started edged upward in December for the second consecutive month."

The publication said some steelmakers believe an easing in consumer credit will result in housing starts and appliance sales equalling last year's levels.

Steel also said prospects for industrial construction are bright and backlogs of structural fabricators are the highest in years. The backlogs are nearly 50 per cent larger than those in early 1964, it added.

"Automakers and appliance manufacturers continue to buy steel cautiously despite relatively low inventories," the magazine continued. "They're concerned about big stocks of finished goods. By Jan. 31, auto dealers will have a 61-day supply of new cars in their lots and with a 51-day stock a year ago."

Industry estimates of first quarter steel shipments reflect varying degrees of optimism, Steel said. It pointed out that mills which boost a good balance between light and heavy products look for shipments to match those in the first three months of last year.

"Mills that are highly oriented toward sheets and the markets that consume them predict deliveries of about 21.1 million tons compared with 21.6 million in the same 1966 quarter. Those that have big stakes in the capital goods and construction markets forecast shipments as high as 22.3 million tons."

Steel production made its third straight weekly gain last week with the output estimated at 2,481,000 net tons, an increase of 32,000 tons over the previous week, the magazine said.

Buying of scrap was light last week, but Steel's composite price on No. 1 heavy melting material was unchanged at $27.37 a gross ton.

Ohio Air Guard Unit To Observe 20th Anniversary

Ohio Air National Guard units stationed at Lockbourne Air Force Base — those that make up the ANG's 121st Tactical Fighter Group — will observe the 20th anniversary of the 166th Tactical Fighter Squadron with an open house Feb. 18 for former members of the two organizations.

Lt. Col. Donald Q. Griffith, commander of the 121st TFG, announced today that more than 950 former members of the 166th and its support elements will be invited to mail this week to invite them to attend the ceremonies. Efforts to locate other former members will continue throughout the remainder of January and the first two weeks of February.

The 166th and its supportive units have been based in Columbus during their entire history — except for tours of active duty in Korea and, during the Berlin Crisis, in France. As a result, most of its members and former members live in the Central Ohio area, many in this community.

Former members are asked to contact the 20th-Year Reunion Committee, 166th Tactical Fighter Squadron, Ohio Air National Guard, Lockbourne.

Ousted Berkeley President Reviews His Stormy Career

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — "During 14½ years, I have fought many battles, a great many more than ever met the public eye," said Clark Kerr last weekend after being fired as president of the world's largest university. "I won a great many of those battles."

The soft-spoken educator did not elaborate, but the high points of his career as head of the University of California already were history.

Most of the headlines sprang from the flagship Berkeley campus, largest in the nine-campus system, where loyalty oaths, free speech, filthy speech and finally a Navy recruiting table occupied the spotlight.

In Kerr's administration the Berkeley campus became battleground for some of the most controversial social and political issues of the day, as well as an esteemed educational and scientific center.

In 1952, Kerr was named the first chancellor on the Berkeley campus—a selection that was made as a move to heal the breach between the regents and the faculty over a loyalty oath dispute.

During the dispute Kerr was chairman of the Academic Senate Committee on Privilege and Tenure that strongly recommended the retention of the faculty members who refused to sign the controversial oath.

The State Supreme Court later declared the oath unconstitutional.

In 1958, Kerr succeeded Robert Gordon Sproul as president of the university.

In the years that followed, communism remained a top of dispute at Berkeley, but even more explosive issues began to emerge.

During the Republican National Convention in San Francisco in July 1964, supporters of then Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, complained that followers of Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania, were recruiting political workers on the Berkeley campus in violation of university rules.

That fall, university officials announced that long-standing rules against political recruiting and fund-raising "mounting political and social action" on the campus would henceforth be enforced.

The enforcement move led to a series of confrontations between the university and young activists led by a philosophy student from New York named Mario Savio. The group called itself the Free Speech Movement.

Discussions between the FSM and the university bogged down and finally collapsed. On Dec. 2, 1964, Savio led about 1,000 persons, including some 100 nonstudents, into Sproul Hall, the Berkeley administration building, for an all-night protest sit-in.

At this point Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown stepped in and ordered the demonstrators arrested. Highway patrolmen, sheriff's deputies and police officers were sent to the campus and more than 800 limp demonstrators were hauled away and arrested. Many of their cases are still on appeal in the courts.

"We fumbled, we floundered, and the worst thing is I still don't know how we should have handled it," Kerr later said of the Sproul Hall episode. "At any other university the administrators wouldn't have known how to handle it any better."

Berkeley campus Chancellor Edward Strong, who was given the choice of taking terminal leave or being fired following the Sproul Hall crisis, charged that Kerr had brought on the trouble by vacillation and capitulation to the rebel students.

Some regents were increasing pressure on Kerr to clamp down on student and nonstudent rule-breakers at the campus. And John Thomson was thinking of a new rule to break.

Thomson, a shaggy-haired, barefoot nonstudent, entered the campus March 3, 1965, with a large sign bearing a single obscene word. He was arrested, but next day a group of young persons paraded with signs bearing the same four-letter word. Police arrested nine of them, including three students.

Kerr, who referred to the controversy as the "filthy speech movement," tried to delegate the matter to a faculty committee, but the committee disclaimed jurisdiction.

On March 9, 1965, Kerr and Acting Chancellor Martin Meyerson announced that they were resigning. Kerr said he was "joining this dramatic step against my inclination" to avoid a new confrontation over the obscenity issue.

Four days later, after receiving strong support from the faculty and after an emergency meeting of the regents, Kerr and Meyerson withdrew their resignations.

Meyerson later stepped down as chancellor and was replaced by Roger Heyns of the University of Michigan.

Republican Ronald Reagan made the activities on the campus and in the surrounding non-student "underground" community a major issue in his campaign for governor against Gov. Brown. Less than a month after Reagan's election there was a new disturbance at the campus, this time in the Student Union Building basement where the university had authorized a Navy recruiting table.

On Nov. 10 a group of peace demonstrators attempted to set up a rival table, but were denied permission. A sit-in followed and nine persons were arrested, including Savio, now a nonstudent who had been denied readmission to the university for applying too late.

A student strike committee was formed, but an attempted boycott of classes petered out when the regents threatened to fire any teaching assistants taking part in the boycott.

After taking office as governor, Reagan called for a 10 per cent slash in the state budget, including the university and state college systems, in a move to wipe out sizeable anticipated deficit. Reagan also asked for a study of the possibility of charging tuition, something opposed by Kerr.

Kerr responded by ordering a freeze on admissions, contending more money, not less, was needed if new students were to be admitted to the university. He was joined in this move by Chancellor Glenn Dumke of the separate state college system.

Reagan, obviously angry, charged that the freeze order was unnecessary and made it a point to attend the meeting of the regents Thursday and Friday in Berkeley.

Reagan, an ex-office member of the Board of Regents, was among those voting for Kerr's dismissal.

Speaking to newsmen after the vote Friday, Kerr said he assumed he still has a professorship in the university School of Business and Public Administration and that he was considering returning to teaching. Asked why, he replied, "Well, I love the University of California."

Will and Ariel Durant Finish 10-Volume Work

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — After a half century of devoted labor, Will and Ariel Durant have finished their 10-volume "The Story of Civilization."

What are they doing now? The same thing they have done during their long life together: researching and writing.

The Durants live only a mile from Hollywood and Vine, but they lead a monastic existence removed from the outer world. Their routine hasn't changed since completion of their mammoth opus. They still spend their days in solitary reading and composition, then exchange ideas in the evening.

"But we're glad that the big work is over—glad that we were able to finish it while we were still sane and not doddering idiots," reported Mrs. Durant. "The last book is 'Rousseau and Revolution,' and it will be out this fall. It carries up to the fall of the Bastille, and that is as far as we go. Will is 81, and we don't believe we should write in our dotage."

The Durants finished "Rousseau and Revolution" in late summer, ending it with a salute to their readers. "After all," said Mrs. Durant, "the unseen but ever-present audience has stuck by us all this time, so we felt we should thank them for their many years of fidelity."

They delivered the manuscript to Simon and Schuster in New York and then departed on a "farewell tour" of Europe.

"It was our first trip since 1912 on which we did not have to devote ourselves to research," said Mrs. Durant.

"We were able to go from country to country saying farewell to the many friends who have helped our work over the years."

When the Durants returned to Hollywood, they found the habits of their lifetime could not be altered, and they plunged once more into intellectual endeavor. At present they are working on a small volume to be called "The Lessons of History," in which they will detail what they have learned from their study of civilization.

"Then we plan to undertake a dual autobiography," Mrs. Durant said, adding wryly, "of course, we are dreaming that we will live as long as Methuselah."

22 Weekend Deaths From Ohio Traffic

At least 22 persons lost their lives in Ohio traffic accidents between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday—the worst weekend death toll of 1967.

The deaths equaled the number killed over the 78-hour New Year's weekend, but that included the last few hours of 1966.

Steel Keeps Near Record Pace

CLEVELAND (AP)—Cutbacks in the production of automobiles and appliances have not kept steel consumption from continuing at a near record pace, Steel Magazine reported today.

The weekly journal of metalworking said most other markets are as strong as they were early last year, the exceptions being rail transportation and residential housing.

"But prospects for residential construction are improving," the magazine added. "Housing started edged upward in December for the second consecutive month."

The publication said some steelmakers believe an easing in consumer credit will result in housing starts and appliance sales equalling last year's levels.

Steel also said prospects for industrial construction are bright and backlogs of structural fabricators are the highest in

Man Will Work

A heartening reminder of basic human nature has emerged in the aftermath of British Columbia's ban on overtime work by its labor force.

Only 50 per cent of the nearly 3,000 men engaged in the giant Peace River power project in north central B.C. returned to the job after the holidays, according to the provincial hydro and power authority.

The reason? No overtime. The area is remote, there is little to do there but work, and the men who go want to make money and are prepared to serve long hours a day in order to do so. The government had to bow, for that project alone.

The fact is that a great many people, probably most Americans, are prepared to work more than 40 hours a week if the price is right or they feel the job is worth it.

Too many individuals are prepared to read into developments of recent years a belief that the human animal doesn't want to work at all. He just isn't built that way.

Bertrand Russell's Past

By John Chamberlain

As Sidney Hook, the philosopher, has pointed out, the tribunal that Bertrand Russell is organizing in Europe to try President Lyndon Johnson and Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara as "war criminals" has no "moral standing in court." For in the not-so-distant past Bertrand Russell has himself justified indiscriminate bombing of a whole people. When Soviet Russia refused to go along with the Acheson and Baruch plans for "internationalizing" the sources of nuclear energy, Lord Russell led the way in advocating a preventive atomic strike against the Kremlin. "Communism," so Russell wrote in 1948, "must be wiped out, and world government must be established."

It would be interesting to know whether Jean-Paul Sartre and Simone de Beauvoir, the French literary figures who have been chosen by Bertrand Russell to head the road-show "Nuremberg trial" of Lyndon Johnson for "war crimes," realize what Russell was saying in 1948. Since both Sartre and Beauvoir have a blind hatred for America, it probably wouldn't make any difference. But the world should know that Bertrand Russell was once an advocate of preventive atomic warfare against far more Communists than have been hit by conventional bombs in Vietnam.

There is also another thing the world should know about Russell's past. Back in 1940 Bertrand Russell and his third wife happened to be living in the United States. Russell had been appointed a professor of philosophy at the College of the City of New York. He needed money to support himself, his wife and his young son, for he couldn't bring funds out of wartime Britain. Since nothing had been said about Russell's social views when he lectured at the University of California in Los Angeles, the New York appointment seemed safe enough.

The Episcopal Bishop William T. Manning, however, happened to have read some of Bertrand Russell's works. When the Bishop complained that Russell was a "recognized propagandist against religion and morality" who "specifically defends adultery," there was an instantaneous furor. The New York City Board of Higher Education defended Russell, but a taxpayer's suit brought the case before a Tammany judge who quoted passages from Russell's books that, in his opinion, condoned sexual infidelity and thus made the appointment "an insult to the people of New York."

The case was one of the more celebrated "academic freedom" flaps of the time. American intellectuals, led by John Dewey, organized a Russell defense committee. But the Tammany judge's ruling against Russell was not appealed. Dr. Albert Barnes, the Argyrol manufacturer who ran a big art foundation in Marion, Pennsylvania, stepped in to rescue Bertrand Russell financially. He offered Russell $6,000 a year for five years to deliver a one-hour lecture each week at his foundation. Russell jumped at the opportunity.

The friendship between Barnes and Russell, however, did not last. Henry Hart, Barnes' friend and biographer, tells a wildly comic story of Dr. Barnes' efforts to come to terms with Bertrand Russell's wife, who insisted on knitting during the Russell lectures. According to Mr. Hart, the knitting disturbed the class. "When we engaged you to teach," Barnes wrote Bertrand Russell, "we did not obligate ourselves to endure forever the trouble-making propensities of your wife." Russell, with pardonable asperity, retorted that "so far as any personal relationship is concerned, you are mistaken in supposing that there is no quarrel with me, since whoever quarrels with my wife quarrels with me." It wasn't long before Russell was fired.

Recalling this bit of history, it is reasonable to ask whether it has anything to do with Bertrand Russell's motives for wishing the world to judge that America is a barbarous land of "war criminals." Professor Hook, who defended Bertrand Russell at the time of his troubles with Bishop Manning, says of his old time philosophical colleague that "there is a good deal of evidence to show that he has become almost pathologically anti-American." When President Kennedy announced the discovery that Soviet atomic missiles had been sent to Cuba, Russell called the American heads of government "ferocious and insane murderers." This is hardly the calm objectivity that one expects from a philosopher.

Maybe certain American individuals did do Russell a wrong in the Nineteen Forties. But why should he take it out on Lyndon Johnson in 1967, especially when Johnson is fighting a far more restrained war against Communists now than Russell himself was advocating when he urged the total atomic destruction of Moscow in 1948?

Speaking of YOUR HEALTH...

By LUSTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Mothers are warned about being careful when their children complain of stomach pains. How can we distinguish between a stomach ache and appendicitis?

The warning to mothers is not meant to concern them, but rather to urge them to avoid harsh laxatives as soon as a child develops a pain in the abdomen. There is too great a tendency to force laxatives and give enemas to children and even to adults who have abdominal distress.

Physicians and surgeons will generally admit that the diagnosis of appendicitis is probably one of the most difficult to make even after years of experience. The reason is that appendicitis may show symptoms that are confusing and often are due to conditions far removed from the region of the appendix.

It might surprise many people to know that a sore throat with swollen glands in the neck may be confused with appendicitis. Tiny swollen glands in the neck may be confused with appendicitis. Tiny swollen glands around the small intestine accompany a sore throat, causing cramps and pain in the lower abdomen. Pleurisy of the lungs is another condition which can be confused with appendicitis.

It is understandable, therefore, that the untrained person would have difficulty in pinpointing the reasons for cramps, spasms and abdominal pains, with or without nausea and vomiting.

Physicians know the confusion and pitfalls of this diagnosis and seek all other means to become positive before recommending special treatment or surgery. Study of the blood can be helpful.

Mothers must be taught to lean in the direction of safety. Use laxatives and enemas only at the direction of the physician. Ice bags, heating pads and household drugs may mask the symptoms which are so very important to the doctor in his search for a diagnosis.

Is it of any serious importance if a child develops large black and blue marks over his legs and arms even though he seems to be in perfectly good health?

These discolorations happen often to young active children who, in play, injure themselves. Almost always injury is the reason for these collections of blood under the skin. Small

NEW YORK (AP) — Bing Crosby and his golfing associates encountered really rough going Saturday and the ABC network and assorted sponsors must have thought longingly of those safe and certain golf programs made months in advance of broadcast time.

A howling gale caused the postponement of the third round of the pro-amateur tournament but on Saturday night Crosby and others tried—rather lamely—to fill out a half-hour of chitchat and news notes but mostly they talked about the weather.

The play on Sunday seemed to involve some rather erratic camera work, but it was interesting but mostly because we had a chance to see some of the celebrity amateurs, like Dean Martin, Andy Williams and Robert Goulet swinging instead of singing.

The final rounds will be broadcast—live and weather permitting—today.

The Business World

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Late last year Dr. Peirre Rinfret, the economist, forecast rather accurately and in sharply clear language that President Johnson would propose more taxes for 1967.

Rinfret followed this forecast with the assessment that "the administration will then go to a corner and pray that such a request for a tax increase will be refused by Congress."

Along with some other economists, Rinfret believes a tax rise at this time—even a surcharge as proposed by Johnson—would damage the economy. A year ago it might have helped, he believes.

Moreover, he suspects the President feels the same way but, because of complex pressures from a crosscurrent of economic and political realities, had little option but to announce his tax measures.

The accuracy of the tax forecast, the manner of delivery, the flair—maybe even the daring—are typical of Rinfret, one of the most popular of a breed that is growing in importance: the economic consultant.

The economic forecaster, as we all know, can be dead wrong, often because he ignores the political ingredient.

Rinfret, who believes the subject is often "political economy" rather than just "economics," feels he was wrong in calling a downturn for the second quarter of this year. "It has already begun," he said in an interview.

Henry Thoreau, he forecast that in 1967 "the mass of men will lead lives of quiet desperation." Then he toned it a bit. "We will have a slowdown," he said, "but it will be the highest level recession in the history of mankind."

Despite its problems, he said, "the American economy is the greatest economic machine in the world."

The question then was put to Rinfret, a man of great Gallic charm and articulation:

"How do you break the news to clients (who pay a basic retainer of $7,000 a year) that you are wrong?" He answered simply, "With these three words: 'I was wrong.'" The assumption follows that he then pays the consequences.

Businessmen will not argue if you conduct your business in a businesslike manner, he believes. "They insist on something for their money. They expect you to bat better than .500. They want you to bat more than .700."

Some forecasters try to attain this through obscure language or by hedging or by couching their analyses in complex language. Rinfret pleads innocent to these charges. He takes an artful approach and speaks simply.

Some economists, for example, examine statistics as a witch doctor studies a sackful of bones. Rinfret searches for "trigger points" and follows this with deft probing of personal contacts in business, politics, government, education.

A trigger point may be a statistic that cannot be explained easily. It may be a mere wrinkle in a chart. It could be, for instance, a shift downward in the volume of intercity truck traffic.

Chronic Chest Pains Persistent Cough

DR. HERMAN H. SHUTTLEWORTH

Persisting chest pains and coughing spells are usually signs of some serious malfunction of your lungs.

The following case is just such an example.

A mother of two teenage children had a serious chest condition that had resisted all efforts of treatment for several years. Discouraged she related her sad, fruitless experience.

Her condition had been diagnosed as "chronic bronchitis." It was found that she was suffering from a long string of secondary ailments such as hot and cold flashes with profuse sweating especially at night, interfering with her sleep. She got up tired every morning and difficult breathing kept her physically exhausted. "Every little effort just wears me out—sometimes I'm just too tired to eat," she complained. Constant deep coughing didn't help matters and sometimes caused heart palpitations along with dizziness and fainting spells. Indigestion related with gas, bloating, constipation and hemorrhoids was enough to make anyone nervous, depressed and bring on crying spells. "I can live with everything else, but please doctor do what you can for my chest!"

Spinal examination pointed out many defective nerves in her spine. It was easy to understand why she suffered with so many different ailments. Spinal x-rays enabled her chiropractor to re-align and balance her spine. This removed the nerve pressure, which caused her problems, and her symptoms slowly disappeared as Nature restored normal function.

Your chiropractic profession recommends regular spinal and nerve check-ups and only a chiropractor can determine if a condition falls into the realm of chiropractic.

Man Will Work

A heartening reminder of basic human nature has emerged in the aftermath of British Columbia's ban on overtime work by its labor force.

Only 50 per cent of the nearly 3,000 men engaged in the giant Peace River power project in north central B.C. returned to the job after the holidays, according to the provincial hydro and power authority.

The reason? No overtime. The area is remote, there is little to do there but work, and the men who go want to make money and are prepared to serve long hours a day in order to do so. The government had to bow, for that project alone.

The fact is that a great many people, probably most Americans, are prepared to work more than 40 hours a week if the price is right or they feel the job is worth it.

Too many individuals are prepared to read into developments of recent years a belief that the human animal doesn't want to work at all. He just isn't built that way.

Bertrand Russell's Past

By John Chamberlain

As Sidney Hook, the philosopher, has pointed out, the tribunal that Bertrand Russell is organizing in Europe to try President Lyndon Johnson and Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara as "war criminals" has no "moral standing in court." For in the not-so-distant past Bertrand Russell has himself justified indiscriminate bombing of a whole people. When Soviet Russia refused to go along with the Acheson and Baruch plans for "internationalizing" the sources of nuclear energy, Lord Russell led the way in advocating a preventive atomic strike against the Kremlin. "Communism" so Russell wrote in 1948, "must be wiped out, and world government must be established."

It would be interesting to know whether Jean-Paul Sartre and Simone de Beauvoir, the French literary figures who have been chosen by Bertrand Russell to head the road-show "Nuremberg trial" of Lyndon Johnson for "war crimes," realize what Russell was saying in 1948. Since both Sartre and Beauvoir have a blind hatred for America, it probably wouldn't make any difference. But the world should know that Bertrand Russell was once an advocate of preventive atomic warfare against far more Communists than have been hit by conventional bombs in Vietnam.

There is also another thing the world should know about Russell's past. Back in 1940 Bertrand Russell and his third wife happened to be living in the United States. Russell had been appointed a professor of philosophy at the College of the City of New York. He needed money to support himself, his wife and his young son, for he couldn't bring funds out of wartime Britain. Since nothing had been said about Russell's social views when he lectured at the University of California in Los Angeles, the New York appointment seemed safe enough.

The Episcopal Bishop William T. Manning, however, happened to have read some of Bertrand Russell's works. When the Bishop complained that Russell was a "recognized propagandist against religion and morality" who "specifically defends adultery," there was an instantaneous furor. The New York City Board of Higher Education defended Russell, but a taxpayer's suit brought the case before a Tammany judge who quoted passages from Russell's books that, in his opinion, condoned sexual infidelity and thus made the appointment "an insult to the people of New York."

The case was one of the more celebrated "academic freedom" flaps of the time. American intellectuals, led by John Dewey, organized a Russell defense committee. But the Tammany judge's ruling against Russell was not appealed. Dr. Albert Barnes, the Argyle manufacturer who ran a big art foundation in Marion, Pennsylvania, stepped in to rescue Bertrand Russell financially. He offered Russell $6,000 a year for five years to deliver a one-hour lecture each week at his foundation. Russell jumped at the opportunity.

The friendship between Barnes and Russell, however, did not last. Henry Hart, Barnes's friend and biographer, tells a wildly comic story of Dr. Barnes's efforts to come to terms with Bertrand Russell's wife, who insisted on knitting during the Russell lectures. According to Mr. Hart, the knitting disturbed the class. "When we engaged you to teach," so Barnes wrote Bertrand Russell, "we did not obligate ourselves to endure forever the trouble-making propensities of your wife." Russell, with pardonable asperity, retorted that "so far as any personal relationship is concerned, you are mistaken in supposing that there is no quarrel with me, since whoever quarrels with my wife quarrels with me." It wasn't long before Russell was fired.

Recalling this bit of history, it is reasonable to ask whether it has anything to do with Bertrand Russell's motives for wishing the world to judge that America is a barbarous land of "war criminals." Professor Hook, who defended Bertrand Russell at the time of his troubles with Bishop Manning, says of his ill-time philosophical colleague that "there is a good deal of evidence to show that he has become almost pathologically anti-American." When President Kennedy announced the discovery that Soviet atomic missiles had been sent to Cuba, Russell called the American heads of government "ferocious and insane murderers." This is hardly the calm objectivity that one expects from a philosopher.

Maybe certain American individuals did do Russell a wrong in the Nineteen Forties. But why should he take it out on Lyndon Johnson in 1967, especially when Johnson is fighting a far more restrained war against Communism now than Russell himself was advocating when he urged the total atomic destruction of Moscow in 1948?

Speaking of YOUR HEALTH...

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Mothers are warned about being careful when their children complain of stomach pains. How can we distinguish between a stomach ache and appendicitis?

The warning to mothers is not meant to concern them, but rather to urge them to avoid harsh laxatives as soon as a child develops a pain in the abdomen. There is too great a tendency to force laxatives and give enemas to children and even to adults who have abdominal distress.

Physicians and surgeons will generally admit that the diagnosis of appendicitis is probably one of the most difficult to make even after years of experience. The reason is that appendicitis may show symptoms that are confusing and often are due to conditions far removed from the region of the appendix.

It might surprise many people to know that a sore throat with swollen glands in the neck may be confused with appendicitis. Tiny swollen glands in the neck may be confused with appendicitis. Tiny swollen glands around the small intestine accompany a sore throat, causing cramps and pain in the lower abdomen. Pleurisy of the lungs is another condition which can be confused with appendicitis.

It is understandable, therefore, that the untrained person would have difficulty in pinpointing the reasons for cramps, spasms and abdominal pains, with or without nausea and vomiting.

Physicians know the confusion and pitfalls of this diagnosis and seek all other means to become positive before recommending special treatment or surgery. Study of the blood can be helpful.

Mothers must be taught to lean in the direction of safety. Use laxatives and enemas only at the direction of the physician. Ice bags, heating pads and household drugs may mask the symptoms which are so very important to the doctor in his search for a diagnosis.

Is it of any serious importance if a child develops large black and blue marks over his legs and arms even though he seems to be in perfectly good health?

These discolorations happen often to young active children who, in play, injure themselves. Almost always injury is the reason for these collections of blood under the skin. Small

NEW YORK (AP) — Bing Crosby and his golfing associates encountered really rough going Saturday and the ABC network and assorted sponsors must have thought longingly of those safe and certain golf programs made months in advance of broadcast time.

A howling gale caused the postponement of the third round of the pro-amateur tournament but on Saturday night Crosby and others tried — rather lamely — to fill out a half-hour of chitchat and news notes but mostly they talked about the weather.

The play on Sunday seemed to involve some rather erratic camera work, but it was interesting but mostly because we had a chance to see some of the celebrity amateurs, like Dean Martin, Andy Williams and Robert Goulet swinging instead of singing.

The final rounds will be broadcast — live and weather permitting — today.

NBC's biography of a race horse, "Thoroughbred," came along while the golf tournament was still on the air, but the dial switching was well-rewarded.

Network cameramen were present on March 26, 1964 when a bay colt was born in the Greenree stud outside of Lexington, Ky., and took his first wobbly steps. And they were around during all the important events in the little thoroughbred's life until last Aug. 17 in Saratoga when, as a two-year-old he ran — and lost — his first important race.

In between was fascinating information on the care and training of valuable horseflesh.

The World Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republicans were a pretty quiet bunch in 1965, the year after their election disaster when the Democrats outnumbered them 295 to 140 in the House and 67 to 33 in the Senate.

They were practically speechless and for want of ideas the Republican House leaders went around trying to pick outsiders brains. They set up task forces to give them a talking point.

Gradually, they regained their speech but not their gusto until the 1966 elections in which they did better, particularly in the House where they picked up an additional 47 seats. They picked up three in the Senate.

They're still the minority party — the Democrats outnumber them 248 to 187 in the House, 64 to 36 in the Senate — but you might not think so to listen to them now.

For example, the Republican House and Senate leaders — Rep. Gerald R. Ford and Sen. Everett M. Dirksen — have just tried to match President Johnson's State of the Union message with one of their own.

It was a very ambitious message and you might get the impression from listening to it, at least Ford's part of it, that the Republicans were the majority party now and were running Congress.

They might very well be able to if they formed a coalition with the Southern Democrats — or could get the Southerners to form such a coalition — although Ford pooh-poohed the thought of it.

He said: "Cynics may call every Republican victory in this Congress a coalition. Let's meet that issue head-on, right now."

"By definition, coalition requires advance consultation and ultimate compromise of conviction to win a legislative victory."

At least that's what he said, although a coalition doesn't have to mean any such thing. And just about two weeks ago the Republicans and Southern Democrats formed their first coalition of the year, whether or not they consulted beforehand.

It was the Republicans and Southern Democrats who, by teaming up on the crucial vote, were able to prevent Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, the Harlem preacher and man-about-town, from taking his seat in the House.

Not one Republican voted in Powell's favor.

But, even with a coalition, Ford will have a tough time trying to translate into reality the various ideas he tossed off in his part of the Republican State of the Union message.

He stuck to domestic problems. Dirksen, who left that field to Ford and concentrated on foreign affairs, was as usual very hawkish on Vietnam. On that problem he backed up Johnson, which is more than some Democrats do.

Ford tried to give the impression that the Johnson administration and the Democratic leadership is tired and out of step with the times.

Since the early 1960s, he said, "the years have slipped by and now Americans in 1967 see the decade that dawned in hope fading into frustration and failure, bafflement and boredom."

Then he outlined at least 31 different steps that need to be taken, none of which the outnumbered Republicans could put over unless enough Democrats joined them.

Ford sounded energetic but most of what he said looks like wishful thinking. Democrats want to get elected in 1968 and they can't afford to spend the next two years helping the Republicans put over their program.

But at the same time, if the Republican-Southern Democratic coalition in the Powell case is a taste of things to come, Johnson's programs are in for a wretched time, too.

This year in Congress looks like more talk than action.

North Vietnam Farmers Depend on Rice Crops

MY TRUNG, North Vietnam, (AP) — The way to the village lies over a narrow dirt causeway. Indeed, the road, winding through watery rice fields, is not much broader than an automobile.

My Trung is in the back reaches of North Vietnam. It is almost 80 miles south of Hanoi, and it is farming country. The rice they eat in Hanoi is grown here and elsewhere in the Nam Ha Province.

Now the rice harvest is over, and the morning light reveals a green and wet country. Bananas and tangerines and oranges and papayas decorate the landscape. Pigs are a crop here, and the water buffalo, strong and moving deliberately across a field, is called "the living tractor."

Not much industry hums in Nam Ha Province. So you come here to study the agriculture of North Vietnam.

The old worry of the north has been not enough rice. For centuries, North Vietnam got more than half its rice from the south, but the war down there has cut on the supply.

Some foods come in from China, but an intense campaign has begun to grow enough rice here for the population of the country.

When the French governed Indochina, there was only one rice crop a year. After World War II, the government headed by Ho Chi Minh seized the old lands and distributed them into collectives. Each farmer got a small plot for his personal use, such as to grow fruits and vegetables and flowers for his family. An ambitious scheme to control the water was started with the construction of many dikes.

Now there are two rice harvests each year, but Nguyen Viet Ca, who lives in the province and keeps records on agriculture for the government, said larger rice crops are needed. With water control and an extra harvest, and improved techniques, he said, the crops today are three to four times as heavy as when the French ruled.

But more rice is a necessity if the country is going to be independent of foreign sources.

Here, too, you hear the familiar stories about the American bombers and we had three air alerts during a two-day visit in the province. The men and women who do the same work in the fields are trained to fire rifles or machine guns, or both, at the aircraft.

The complaints become bitter when these farmers accuse the Americans of trying to bomb their dikes and destroy the water control system.

Viet Tung, a newspaperman from Nam Dinh, the only city in the province, said that a 1,000-pound bomb was dropped Dec. 6 last year on the dike at the village of Xuan Tien, along the Ninh Co River. He produced a picture of a dike and said the portion destroyed, clearly visible in the photograph, was 24 meters long — about 26 yards — and nine meters deep.

This reporter explained to Viet Tung that he had talked to persons in the American government who said the policy is not to bomb dikes, but military targets, and that any bombing of dikes is a mistake which is all too common in any war. Viet Tung's reaction is to show you the photograph again.

Chinese Struggle Began in 1958

EDITOR'S NOTE — What is going on in China and what is the outlook? William L. Ryan, an AP specialist on Communist affairs, seeks to answer these and other questions in a series of five articles this week, of which this is the first

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

The 400-year-old ghost of Hai Jui returned to haunt Mao Tse-tung and frightened him into launching the gigantic struggle that grips Communist China today.

The confusing and dangerous upheaval is traced by Chinese in the West to June 1958, and the publication of an essay called "Hai Jui's Scolding of the Emperor," made into a play two years later with the title of "Hai Jui's Dismissal."

When the essay and play appeared, says Dr. C.Y. Cheng, head of the University of Michigan Department of Chinese Studies, many Chinese intellectuals and many nonintellectuals immediately recognized the symbolism.

Hai Jui, in the Chinese mind, stands for righteousness and justice. In this case, he stood for Peng Teh-huai, whom Mao dismissed as defense minister because Peng opposed the "great leap forward" launched in March 1958.

The "leap" was supposed to transform China within three years into a mighty economic power — by regimenting the half-billion peasants in "people's communes" and by putting urban workers into millions of backyard smelters. The "leap" was headed for debacle even in its early stages.

The author of the essay and play was Wu Han, deputy mayor of Peking and right-hand man to the powerful mayor and Politburo member, Peng Chen, who was considered then an outstanding contender for Mao's mantle.

The work was a protest against Mao. Even as far back as 1958, the big struggle had begun. Mao's position had been considerably weakened late that year by opposition to his policies. His opponents included his old comrade-in-arms, long an heir apparent, Liu Shao-chi.

It now develops, from what is being disclosed in the internal propaganda war in Peking, that Mao was shoved aside as chairman of government, the equivalent of president, and retained only his party chairmanship. Liu took the presidency. Today's Red Guards wall newspapers claim Mao left the job against his will. Dr. Cheng says that probably is correct.

This is not the first power

struggle in China, nor by any means the first big purge.

In February 1956, Nikita S. Khrushchev, in a secret speech to the Soviet Communist party's 20th congress, destroyed the legend of a Stalin three years dead, portrayed him as a blood-thirsty monster and blunderer.

Mao had no particular love for Stalin. He had clashed with the Soviet dictator several times. Stalin tried to impede and slow down Mao's revolution to bring it under Soviet control, and Mao, in turn, purged and tossed out pro-Stalin elements.

But all the evidence suggests Mao did not like the precedent being set in Moscow. It might some day apply to Mao in the same way. Dictators have a tendency in their waning years to want to make gods of themselves.

China now was entering a critical period in its relations with the Soviet Union. Khrushchev, in October 1957, had promised Mao a prototype sample of the atom bomb and data on how to manufacture it. But he dragged his feet. In November 1957, Mao and Marshal Peng, his defense minister, traveled to Moscow to prod Khrushchev. It became clear the Soviet chief had changed his mind. Mao was furious.

Defense Minister Peng, who had loyally supported Mao at critical moments, evidently opposed the idea of getting into a verbal Donnybrook with the Russians. As a professional soldier, he saw the U.S.S.R. as the only source of where withal for China's ascent to the status of major world power.

As Hai Jui had challenged the emperor 400 years before, now Peng challenged the master of the party. Mao, despite other differences with members of his Politburo, still had plenty of authority. He turned for help to the saturnine military strategist, Marshal Lin Biao. In April 1959, Mao fired Peng as defense minister and appointed Lin in his place. Lin eventually would become Mao's favorite, the chief evangelist of "Mao Tse-tung's thinking."

The Wu Han essay, two months later, was a clear sign of disaffection in high places and resentment of Mao's actions.

But a new phase, which began in 1961, was even more serious. Now two camps were forming, and the republication of the essay as a drama was, in effect, a demand that Marshal Peng be reinstated as defense minister.

China was then going through a series of natural calamities — floods and drought — and in the grip of deep economic difficulties.

Essayist Wu Han, with the protection of his chief, Peng Chen, and the Peking city party committee, produced the play which presented Hai Jui — and thus Peng Teh-huai — as the one who "redressed the grievances of the people." Indirectly, the play also was proposing the end of people's communes and the return of commune land to the peasants for private cultivation. The "great leap," coupled with the natural calamities, had proved an economic disaster, as the Russians had predicted it would.

Implicitly, the play was an indictment of Mao and praise for those purged for opposing him. By now, it seemed likely that President Liu and Peking's Mayor Peng Chen were allies. They seemed to have firm control of the party apparatus, the party-dominated trade unions of which Liu had been an architect, and the eight-million-strong Young Communist League, which Peng had built and directed over the years.

A rival group appeared to be headed by Premier Chou, Chen Yi, vice premier and foreign minister, and their government apparatus. From all appearances, the party general secretary, Teng Hsiao-ping, tried to stay neutral. At this stage, Lin Biao appeared a balancing force in the middle.

For two years, there seemed to be an uneasy truce between the two contending camps. Then the dam broke.

The World Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republicans were a pretty quiet bunch in 1965, the year after their election disaster when the Democrats outnumbered them 235 to 140 in the House and 67 to 33 in the Senate.

They were practically speechless and for want of ideas the Republican House leaders went around trying to pick outsiders brains. They set up task forces to give them a talking point.

Gradually, they regained their speech but not their gusto until the 1966 elections in which they did better, particularly in the House where they picked up an additional 47 seats. They picked up three in the Senate.

They're still the minority party — the Democrats outnumber them 248 to 187 in the House, 64 to 36 in the Senate — but you might not think so to listen to them now.

For example, the Republican House and Senate leaders — Rep. Gerald R. Ford and Sen. Everett M. Dirksen — have just tried to match President Johnson's State of the Union message with one of their own.

It was a very ambitious message and you might get the impression from listening to it, at least Ford's part of it, that the Republicans were the majority party now and were running Congress.

They might very well be able to if they formed a coalition with the Southern Democrats — or could get the Southerners to form such a coalition — although Ford pooh-poohed the thought of it.

He said: "Cynics may call every Republican victory in this Congress a coalition. Let's meet that issue head-on, right now. 'By definition, coalition requires advance consultation and ultimate compromise of conviction to win a legislative victory.'"

At least that's what he said, although a coalition doesn't have to mean any such thing. And just about two weeks ago the Republicans and Southern Democrats formed their first coalition of the year, whether or not they consulted beforehand.

It was the Republicans and Southern Democrats who, by teaming up on the crucial vote, were able to prevent Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, the Harlem preacher and man-about-town, from taking his seat in the House.

Not one Republican voted in Powell's favor.

But, even with a coalition, Ford will have a tough time trying to translate into reality the various ideas he tossed off in his part of the Republican State of the Union message.

He stuck to domestic problems. Dirksen, who left that field to Ford and concentrated on foreign affairs, was as usual very hawkish on Vietnam. On that problem he backed up Johnson, which is more than some Democrats do.

Ford tried to give the impression that the Johnson administration and the Democratic leadership is tired and out of step with the times.

Since the early 1960s, he said, "the years have slipped by and now Americans in 1967 see the decade that dawned in hope fading into frustration and failure, bafflement and boredom."

Then he outlined at least 31 different steps that need to be taken, none of which the outnumbered Republicans could put over unless enough Democrats joined them.

Ford sounded energetic but most of what he said looks like wishful thinking. Democrats want to get elected in 1968 and they can't afford to spend the next two years helping the Republicans put over their program.

But at the same time, if the Republican-Southern Democratic coalition in the Powell case is a taste of things to come, Johnson's programs are in for a wretched time, too.

This year in Congress looks like more talk than action.

North Vietnam Farmers Depend on Rice Crops

MY TRUNG, North Vietnam, (AP) — The way to the village lies over a narrow dirt causeway. Indeed, the road, winding through watery rice fields, is not much broader than an automobile.

My Trung is in the back reaches of North Vietnam. It is almost 80 miles south of Hanoi, and it is farming country. The rice they eat in Hanoi is grown here and elsewhere in the Nam Ha Province.

Now the rice harvest is over, and the morning light reveals a green and wet country. Bananas and tangerines and oranges and papayas decorate the landscape. Pigs are a crop here, and the water buffalo, strong and moving deliberately across a field, is called "the living tractor."

Not much industry hums in Nam Ha Province. So you come here to study the agriculture of North Vietnam.

The old worry of the north has been not enough rice. For centuries, North Vietnam got more than half its rice from the south, but the war down there has cut on the supply.

Some foods come in from China, but an intense campaign has begun to grow enough rice here for the population of the country.

When the French governed Indochina, there was only one rice crop a year. After World War II, the government headed by Ho Chi Minh seized the old lands and distributed them into collectives. Each farmer got a small plot for his personal use, such as to grow fruits and vegetables and flowers for his family. An ambitious scheme to control the water was started with the construction of many dikes.

Now there are two rice harvests each year, but Nguyen Viet Ca, who lives in the province and keeps records on agriculture for the government, said larger rice crops are needed. With water control and an extra harvest, and improved techniques, he said, the crops today are three to four times as heavy as when the French ruled.

But more rice is a necessity if the country is going to be independent of foreign sources.

Here, too, you hear the familiar stories about the American bombers and we had three air alerts during a two-day visit in the province. The men and women who do the same work in the fields are trained to fire rifles or machine guns, or both, at the aircraft.

The complaints become bitter when these farmers accuse the Americans of trying to bomb their dikes and destroy the water control system.

Viet Tung, a newspaperman from Nam Dinh, the only city in the province, said that a 1,000-pound bomb was dropped Dec. 6 last year on the dike at the village of Xuan Tien, along the Ninh Co River. He produced a picture of a dike and said the portion destroyed, clearly visible in the photograph, was 24 meters long — about 26 yards — and nine meters deep.

This reporter explained to Viet Tung that he had talked to persons in the American government who said the policy is not to bomb dikes, but military targets, and that any bombing of dikes is a mistake which is all too common in any war. Viet Tung's reaction is to show you the photograph again.

Chinese Struggle Began in 1958

EDITOR'S NOTE — What is going on in China and what is the outlook? William L. Ryan, an AP specialist on Communist affairs, seeks to answer these and other questions in a series of five articles this week, of which this is the first

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

The 400-year-old ghost of Hai Jui returned to haunt Mao Tse-tung and frightened him into launching the gigantic struggle that grips Communist China today.

The confusing and dangerous upheaval is traced by Chinese in the West to June 1959, and the publication of an essay called "Hai Jui's Scolding of the Emperor," made into a play two years later with the title of "Hai Jui's Dismissal."

When the essay and play appeared, says Dr. C.Y. Cheng, head of the University of Michigan Department of Chinese Studies, every Chinese intellectual and many nonintellectuals immediately recognized the symbolism.

Hai Jui, in the Chinese mind, stands for righteousness and justice. In this case, he stood for Peng Teh-huai, whom Mao dismissed as defense minister because Peng opposed the "great leap forward" launched in March 1958.

The "leap" was supposed to transform China within three years into a mighty economic power — by regimenting the half-billion peasants in "people's communes" and by putting urban workers into millions of backyard smelters. The "leap" was headed for debacle even in its early stages.

The author of the essay and play was Wu Han, deputy mayor of Peking and right-hand man to the powerful mayor and Politburo member, Peng Chen, who was considered then an outstanding contender for Mao's mantle.

The work was a protest against Mao. Even as far back as 1958, the big struggle had begun. Mao's position had been considerably weakened late that year by opposition to his policies. His opponents included his old comrade-in-arms, long an heir apparent, Liu Shao-chi.

It now develops, from what is being disclosed in the internal propaganda war in Peking, that Mao was shoved aside as chairman of government, the equivalent of president, and retained only his party chairmanship. Liu took the presidency. Today's Red Guards wall newspapers claim Mao left the job against his will. Dr. Cheng says that probably is correct.

This is not the first power

struggle in China, nor by any means the first big purge.

This statue of Johann Strauss Jr. stands amid beautiful surroundings in Vienna's Stadtpark.

This Is Strauss Waltz Time In Austria, Other Countries

By SANDO BOLOGNA
Written Especially for Central Press and This Newspaper

Throughout Austria, and in some other European countries, this is the "Strauss Waltz Year."

There will be more waltzing in Vienna than, perhaps, in any year since Johann Strauss and his three sons composed and popularized the waltz in this city during the 1800s.

Dance competitions, operettas, concerts, and balls will salute the Strauss family as Austria joyously celebrates the 100th anniversary of the best known Strauss waltz, "An Der Schonen Blauen Donau." ("The Beautiful Blue Danube Waltz.")

When the composition was first played in Vienna Feb. 15, 1867, during a carnival program, it earned a lukewarm reception. But, with the increasing popularity of three-quarter-time music, the "Blue Danube Waltz" eventually represented the gay, lilting spirit of Vienna.

Naturally, "The Beautiful Blue Danube Waltz" will be the overture by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra for the Vienna Opera Ball on Feb. 2, which will mark the climax of the carnival season.

The Johann Strauss Centennial Festival Week will be ushered in with a concert on Feb. 14 by the Vienna Symphony Orchestra and the Maennergesangverein. Wreaths will be placed on the grave of Johann Strauss Jr. on Feb. 15 — the centenary of the famous waltz number. A gala program will follow in City Hall.

The influence of the Strauss family on the music of Austria will be retold during the year. The elder Johann Strauss (1804-1849) was the son of a Viennese innkeeper, who became a violinist in a dance orchestra. Later, Johann conducted his own orchestra in Austria and in several European countries.

The elder Strauss composed 251 selections, mostly "light music," with the most famous being "Donaulied." ("Songs of the Danube"). He died in Vienna in 1849 after having returned from a triumphant concert tour of England.

Strauss' eldest son, Johann Jr., became the most famous

Strauss composer, earning the recognition as "The Waltz King." He was widely acclaimed throughout Europe and the United States as a composer-conductor of waltz, quadrille and operetta.

This Strauss composed nearly 500 waltzes, the most famous being "The Beautiful Blue Danube." Other well known pieces of his are "Voices of Spring" and "Tales from the Vienna Woods." "Die Fledermaus" ("The Bat") is one of his most popular operettas.

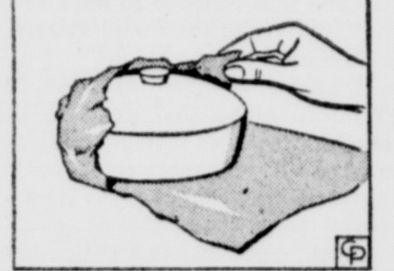

Joseph, the second son, also a prosperous conductor, wrote 283 dance pieces and a number of operettas, some of which were not discovered until the 20th century.

Eduard, the youngest son, had a total of 318 dance selections to his credit, but he devoted much of his efforts to interpreting the music of his brothers and his father.

The elder Strauss didn't want his sons to become musicians. They balked against his wishes toward other careers and they followed in his musical rane.

Solomon or Socrates Is Needed in Pennsylvania

By WILLIAM E. DEIBLER

YORK, Pa. (AP) —The cartons were filled to overflowing with garbage. Some of the debris had fallen to the pavement, littering the sidewalk and spilling over into the gutter. "Awful sight ain't it mister?" the man said.

It was. This was no alleyway, no slum tenement backyard. The man was standing on a corner in York's Continental Square, just across the street from the York National Bank.

Continental Square, and almost every other street in York are covered with garbage and litter. In some places, boxes filled with trash are stacked at curbside higher than parking meters.

The refuse has been piling up since last Dec. 28. That's the day the city's 50 garbage collectors walked off the job because Mayor John L. Snyder refused to give them a raise.

Actually, the workers walked off their jobs for the first time on Oct. 8. It was an on again, off again proposition until the mayor's Dec. 28 turnaround precipitated a final walkout.

York, situated in Pennsylvania Dutch country in the southeastern part of the state, is a prosperous, usually picturesque community.

The 50,000-plus residents of York are outspokenly proud of their community.

But they're not bragging today. They're angry and frustrated, not certain who's at fault, but they feel somebody has got to take action soon.

"I've lived in this town all of my life," a woman in her late 60s said. "I was walking down the street the other day and a rat ran across my foot. Nothing like that has ever happened here before. It's a disgrace."

The stacked up garbage is a health menace and a fire hazard. Both city and state health officers have warned that there is "evidence of rodent activity" in the streets. They say the rats could become a serious problem if the garbage continues to accumulate.

The City Council agreed in December to give the workers a raise—drivers to $102, throwers to $99 for a six-day week—but Snyder refused to approve the increase.

He said the law was clear. The workers broke the law by going on strike, he maintained. And he would be breaking the law if he gave them a raise.

State officials in Harrisburg, the state's capital, concede that Snyder would indeed be violating the law by granting the raise but added that in the circumstances, no court would accept a taxpayer's suit against the mayor.

"That's a fine kettle of fish," Snyder said. "They're telling me to break the law. I believe in the law, and I intend to uphold it."

The city's Sanitation Department workers asked for a raise in September. Garbage truck drivers were being paid $88.50 for a six-day week; throwers, the men who load the trucks, $85.50.

Snyder said he met with the men and explained to them that a raise was impossible at the time because the city's budget wouldn't permit it. He said the matter would be considered when a new budget was drawn, late in December.

The mayor also cited a state law, adopted in 1947, which bars municipal employees from striking.

York disposes of its garbage at a sanitary landfill 12 miles from the city. Officials have been keeping the site open seven days a week for residents who want to haul their own trash during the strike. But the 24-mile round trip discourages most home owners.

But what about public opinion?

"I don't give a damn about what the public thinks," Snyder said.

"They elected me to do a job, and I'm going to do it. The law is the law. I'm going to follow it—that's my make-up."

And while the winds of political controversy blow, the piles of garbage in York continue to grow.

For an extra-delicious confectioners sugar frosting be lavish with the butter! Flavor with vanilla, grated lemon rind, grated orange rind or a mixture of melted chocolate and strong coffee. Instant coffee dissolved in boiling water (and then cooled) may be used with the melted chocolate.

Caretaker Dies In Apartment Fire

CINCINNATI (AP)—Otis Miller, 57, died early today in a fire in an apartment building where he was the caretaker.

The fire occurred in Miller's third floor apartment and caused an estimated $1,200 damage. Miller's body was found near the door and firemen said he apparently died of smoke inhalation.

Careless smoking was believed to have caused the fire.

Use your freezer for storing chicken parts, then make up a good quantity of chicken stock at one time. After the stock is made it, too, should be stored in the freezer (in individual 1-cup portions) for use when needed.

Wing tips, giblets and bony back parts make excellent chicken stock when coupled with seasonings.

This Is Strauss Waltz Time In Austria, Other Countries

By SANDO BOLOGNA
Written Especially for Central Press and This Newspaper

Throughout Austria, and in some other European countries, this is the "Strauss Waltz Year."

There will be more waltzing in Vienna than, perhaps, in any year since Johann Strauss and his three sons composed and popularized the waltz in this city during the 1800s.

Dance competitions, operettas, concerts, and balls will salute the Strauss family as Austria joyously celebrates the 100th anniversary of the best known Strauss waltz, "An Der Schonen Blauen Donau." ("The Beautiful Blue Danube Waltz.")

When the composition was first played in Vienna Feb. 15, 1867, during a carnival program, it earned a lukewarm reception. But, with the increasing popularity of three-quarter-time music, the "Blue Danube Waltz" eventually represented the gay, lilting spirit of Vienna.

Naturally, "The Beautiful Blue Danube Waltz" will be the overture for the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra for the Vienna Opera Ball on Feb. 2, which will mark the climax of the carnival season.

The Johann Strauss Centennial Festival Week will be ushered in with a concert on Feb. 14 by the Vienna Symphony Orchestra and the Maennergesangverein. Wreaths will be placed on the grave of Johann Strauss Jr. on Feb. 15 — the centenary of the famous waltz number. A gala program will follow in City Hall.

The influence of the Strauss family on the music of Austria will be retold during the year. The elder Johann Strauss (1804-1849) was the son of a Viennese innkeeper, who became a violinist in a dance orchestra. Later, Johann conducted his own orchestra in Austria and in several European countries.

The elder Strauss composed 251 selections, mostly "light music," with the most famous being "Donauwalzer," ("Songs of the Danube"). He died in Vienna in 1849 after having returned from a triumphant concert tour of England.

Strauss' eldest son, Johann Jr., became the most famous

Strauss composer, earning the recognition as "The Waltz King." He was widely acclaimed throughout Europe and the United States as a composer-conductor of waltz, quadrille and operetta.

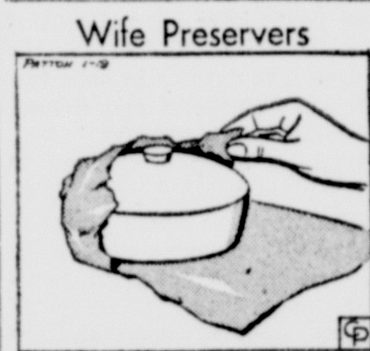

This Strauss composed nearly 500 waltzes, the most famous being "The Beautiful Blue Danube." Other well known pieces of his are "Voices of Spring" and "Tales from the Vienna Woods." "Die Fledermaus" ("The Bat") is one of his most popular operettas.

Joseph, the second son, also a prosperous conductor, wrote 283 dance pieces and a number of operettas, some of which were not discovered until the 20th century.

Eduard, the youngest son, had a total of 318 dance selections to his credit, but he devoted much of his efforts to interpreting the music of his brothers and his father.

The elder Strauss didn't want his sons to become musicians. They balked against his wishes toward other careers and they followed in his musical line.

Now the Austrians have dedicated an entire year to the memory of a father and three sons who exerted their talents to popularizing the waltz.

Logan Elm Stops Flaget, 54-47

Logan Elm won its 102nd game by beating visiting Bishop Flaget, 54-47, Saturday.

The Braves' defense won the game for them according to L.E. Coach Keith Merrin.

The Braves used a man-to-man defense in the first and fourth periods and a 1-3-1 zone during the second and third periods. Flaget used a man-to-man defense the first, second and third periods. In the final canto they went into a press.

Logan Elm hit 22 shots from the field for a 44 per cent accuracy rate for the night. Bishop Flaget hit 14 of 54 for a 26 per cent rate.

BOTH TEAMS had 11 turnovers in the game.

The Braves controlled the boards, pulling down 36 rebounds while Bishop Flaget grabbed 27.

Russ Merrin was the leading rebounder for the Braves with 15. From the foul line, Logan Elm could do no better than 10 of 24 shots for a cool 42 per cent their poorest performance of the year.

Bishop Flaget canned 19 of 23 for an 82 per cent average at the charity stripe.

Bishop Flaget jumped to a quick 9-2 lead. The visitors led

Laurelville Hands The Plains Of Athens County 71-59 Loss

Laurelville, playing without their outstanding junior center Bob Bowers, put together one of their best team efforts of the year, defeating visiting The Plains of Athens County, 71-59.

The game was real close, with seldom more than four points separating the two teams until midway through the final quarter.

The visitors held a 19-17 edge

Montreal Coach Blasts Everybody

CHICAGO (AP) — Coach Toe Blake called his Montreal Canadiens "a bunch of quitters" and virtually dismissed their hopes of repeating as National Hockey League champions Sunday night following a 4-1 loss to the Chicago Black Hawks.

"I never thought I'd have a team that would quit," shouted the infuriated, gum-chewing Blake, who has guided the Canadiens to eight championships in the last 11 years.

The Canadiens, who obviously received an earlier tongue lashing from Blake, sat dejectedly and stripped their uniforms slowly.

The host team opened up a five-point lead over second-place New York and 15 over the fourth-place Canadiens.

"I've been accused of not playing everybody," said Blake, fuming. "All I know is I got 18 guys dressed and they all played ... or shall I say they were on the ice."

Blake then took a crack at the Chicago fans who were on Montreal goalie Gary Bauman. At one point Bauman tossed a puck into the stands and the fans retaliated with paper cups, an egg and an orange.

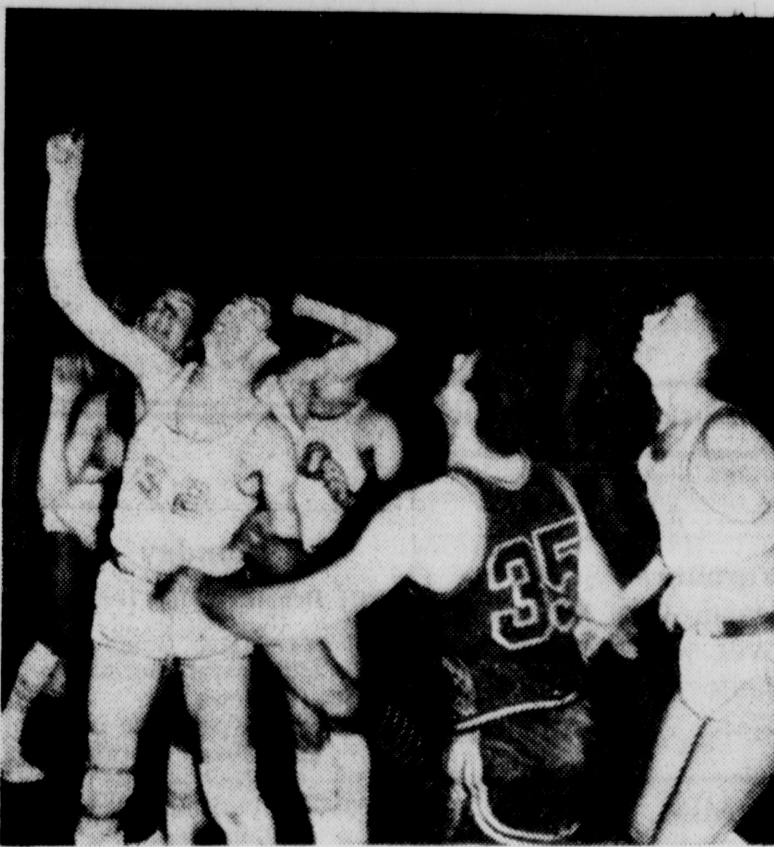

CHS Tigers Edge Westfall, 36-35

Circleville's Tigers edged host Westfall, 36-35, Saturday in a tilt that saw most of the thrills and action condensed into the last 20 seconds of the tilt.

And although the Tigers won the game, it had to be somewhat of a moral victory for Westfall, a team that earlier in the year went down to defeat, 70-40, to the Tigers.

The Mustangs of Larry Wilson set the pace of the game from the beginning, moving very slowly and deliberately on offense, even though they trailed most of the time.

Westfall controlled the tip and scored the first two points on a shot by Charlie Palmer. Jeff Steele came back with a bucket for the Tigers, deadlocking the score.

Cincinnati Names General Manager

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Robert L. Howsam, an advocate of "growing your players" through a strong farm system, is the new general manager of the Cincinnati Reds of the National League.

Howsam, general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals since 1964, was named Sunday to succeed William O. DeWitt. DeWitt has been serving as interim general manager since he sold the baseball club recently to a group of Cincinnatians for an estimated $7 million.

DeWitt will stay on as a consultant.

Announcement of Howsam's appointment was made by Francis L. Dale, club president, and William J. Williams, chairman of a selections committee Dale also is president and publisher of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Calling his new job a "tremendous challenge" because he will be in complete charge of the club, Howsam said:

"This is an opportunity that comes only once or maybe a few times in a lifetime."

Howsam was given a three-year contract.

He said he had no contract with the Cardinals and that he understood there might be an announcement in St. Louis Tuesday about his successor.

Howsam, in discussing the Reds team, called it a "talented" and young club and one "with a future."

"I think with a few breaks here and there, particularly as to the pitching, we can make a run for it (the pennant)," he said.

Howsam, 48, married and a native of Denver, has been in baseball in an executive position for 20 years. He was general manager of the Denver Bears, of the old American Association for 12 years. He also was one of the founders of the American Football League and was president of the Denver Broncos of the AFL in 1960.

He also worked four years with George Weiss (then head man of the Yankees) as head of the Denver franchise, two with Branch Rickey, and one with John Quinn, one of the league's top front office men.

Dale explained that one factor in picking Howsam was that he had experience in the transition from an old park to a new stadium when the Cardinals moved last year. Plans for a new stadium figured in the Reds' sale.

One of the new general manager's first jobs will be to confer with city officials on the contract with the new ownership and plans for the stadium.

CHS Tigers Edge Westfall, 36-35

Circleville's Tigers edged host Westfall, 36-35, Saturday in a tilt that saw most of the thrills and action condensed into the last 20 seconds of the tilt.

And although the Tigers won the game, it had to be somewhat of a moral victory for Westfall, a team that earlier in the year went down to defeat, 70-40, to the Tigers.

The Mustangs of Larry Wilson set the pace of the game from the beginning, moving very slowly and deliberately on offense, even though they trailed most of the time.

Westfall controlled the tip and scored the first two points on a shot by Charlie Palmer. Jeff Steele came back with a bucket for the Tigers, deadlocking the score.

THE GAME was tied again at 4-4 when Delbert Haney converted for the Mustangs and Tim Stonerock retailed for the Tigers. Then Steele's charity toss gave the visiting Red and Black the edge.

But Haney pumped in a long jump shot to give the edge to the Mustangs, and Palmer added another field goal before the Tigers could get back on the scoreboard.

Steele made it 8-7 tipping in a rebound. Tony Lightle scored from the charity stripe to give the Mustangs a two point lead. The score was knotted again at 9-9 by Stonerock who scored again from the field and at the foul line before the quarter ended, giving Circleville a 12-11 edge.

For most of the second quarter, Circleville held on to the lead. But Ed Cornwell tied the score at 17-17 and then Haney put the Mustangs ahead, 19-17, with less than three minutes to play.

Stonerock scored with 2:29 to go in the quarter, but Cornwell rebounded a shot, making good on his second effort and the hosts led for the last time in the tilt, 21-19.

Dan Speakman pumped in two at the foul line and Joe Winner made a long set shot with 48 seconds to go, giving Circleville a 23-21 edge they carried into the dressing rooms at halftime.

IN THE third quarter, Westfall was limited to five points. Cornwell scored from the field less than two minutes after the period started. He hit from the foul line with 3:10 to go. Andy Hamman put a field goal through the hoop with less than a minute remaining in the period for the only other Mustang points in the period.

The Tigers were no ball of fire during the period, scoring only eight points.

The score was 31-26 as the fourth quarter started.

Westfall notched the first five points of the final canto, knotting the score at 31-31. It was the eighth time in the game that the score was tied. The Tigers moved ahead on a foul shot by Winner and a field goal by Speakman.

Palmer brought the Mustangs within one point, 34-33, and less than a minute showed on the clock. Both teams missed scoring opportunities in the final minute, Circleville from the field and Westfall at the charity stripe.

WITH 18 seconds to go, Westfall gained control of the ball and called time out to set up a last ditch scoring effort.

But the Mustangs lost the ball on a turnover and Stonerock picked it up. He was promptly fouled, and seven seconds showed on the clock.

Stonerock hit the first shot and was accorded the bonus since the one and one rule was in effect. He made good on his second shot, giving Circleville a three point lead with just seven seconds remaining in the game.

Taking no chances on committing a foul and giving Westfall an opportunity for a three point play, the Tigers watched the Mustangs fire a long shot for a last ditch effort and then allowed Haney to rebound the ball and put it through the hoop an instant before the buzzer sounded ending the game.

Tim Stonerock, the game's leading scorer, was well below his season average with just 13 markers on five field goals and three foul shots.

Jeff Steele had nine for Circleville, Joe Winner and Dan Speakman five each and Dan Gibbs four.

FOR THE losers, Andy Hamman's 10 points was high. Ed Cornwell, Charlie Palmer and Delbert Haney scored eight each and Tony Lightle added one at the foul line.

Circleville hit 13 of 38 tries from the field for a 34.4 per cent accuracy rate. At the foul line, the Tigers made 10 of 16 shots.

Westfall outscored Circleville from the field, making 14 of 41 shots for a 34.1 shooting average. But the Mustangs lost the game at the foul line, where they made only seven of 16 shots, a cool 43.7 per cent average.

The Tigers had 29 rebounds in the game compared to 21 for Westfall.

Circleville committed 11 turnovers and Westfall 13.

The Tigers now have a 5-7 record for the season. Westfall has won four and lost 10.

Friday night, Circleville hosts Greenfield McClain in South Central Ohio League action. Westfall travels to Piketon for a Scioto Valley Conference game.

Cincinnati Names General Manager

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Robert L. Howsam, an advocate of "growing your players" through a strong farm system, is the new general manager of the Cincinnati Reds of the National League.

Howsam, general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals since 1964, was named Sunday to succeed William O. DeWitt. DeWitt has been serving as interim general manager since he sold the baseball club recently to a group of Cincinnatians for an estimated $7 million.

DeWitt will stay on as a consultant.

Announcement of Howsam's appointment was made by Francis L. Dale, club president, and William J. Williams, chairman of a selections committee. Dale also is president and publisher of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Calling his new job a "tremendous challenge" because he will be in complete charge of the club, Howsam said:

"This is an opportunity that comes only once or maybe a few times in a lifetime."

Howsam was given a three-year contract.

He said he had no contract with the Cardinals and that he understood there might be an announcement in St. Louis Tuesday about his successor.

Howsam, in discussing the Reds team, called it a "talented" and young club and one "with a future."

"I think with a few breaks here and there, particularly as to the pitching, we can make a run for it (the pennant)," he said.

Howsam, 48, married and a native of Denver, has been in baseball in an executive position for 20 years. He was general manager of the Denver Bears, of the old American Association for 12 years. He also was one of the founders of the American Football League and was president of the Denver Broncos of the AFL in 1960.

He also worked four years with George Weiss (then head man of the Yankees) as head of the Denver franchise, two with Branch Rickey, and one with John Quinn, one of the league's top front office men.

Dale explained that one factor in picking Howsam was that he had experience in the transition from an old park to a new stadium when the Cardinals moved last year. Plans for a new stadium figured in the Reds' sale.

One of the new general manager's first jobs will be to confer with city officials on the contract with the new ownership and plans for the stadium.

Logan Elm Stops Flaget, 54-47

Logan Elm won its 102nd game by beating visiting Bishop Flaget, 54-47, Saturday.

The Braves' defense won the game for them according to LE Coach Keith Merrin.

The Braves used a man-to-man defense in the first and fourth periods and a 1-3-1 zone during the second and third periods. Flaget used a man-to-man defense the first, second and third periods. In the final canto they went into a press.

Montreal Coach Blasts Everybody

CHICAGO (AP) — Coach Toe Blake called his Montreal Canadiens "a bunch of quitters" and virtually dismissed their hopes of repeating as National Hockey League champions Sunday night following a 4-1 loss to the Chicago Black Hawks.

"I never thought I'd have a team that would quit," shouted the infuriated, gum-chewing Blake, who has guided the Canadiens to eight championships in the last 11 years.

The Canadiens, who obviously received an earlier tongue lashing from Blake, sat dejectedly and stripped their uniforms slowly.

The host team opened up a five-point lead over second-place New York and 15 over the fourth-place Canadiens.

"I've been accused of not playing everybody," said Blake, fuming. "All I know is I got 18 guys dressed and they all played ... or shall I say they were on the ice."

Blake then took a crack at the Chicago fans who were on Montreal goalie Gary Bauman. At one point Bauman tossed a puck into the stands and the fans retaliated with paper cups, an egg and an orange.

Westfall Jayvees Win

The Circleville reserve squad lost to Westfall Saturday night in a game that was closer than the final score of 48-28 would indicate.

At one point in the final quarter, Circleville pulled within six points of the Mustangs junior varsity.

But the Tiger reserves were forced to foul numerous times in the closing minutes of the game, and the accurate shooting Mustangs gained most of their points at the charity stripe toward the end of the game.

The game got off to a slow start with the Mustangs leading, 7-3 at the end of the first quarter. By halftime, the Mustangs led, 21-8. They built their margin to 30-18 as the final period began.

FOR THE winners John Furniss was the leading scorer, hitting five field goals and 11 foul shots for a 21 point total. Bob Barnes and Bob Oesterle both scored nine, Don Combs added four, Gene Carfrey three and Larry Selby two.

Only three Tigers broke into the scoring column in the game. Phil Diehl scored seven points before fouling out in the fourth period. Mark Downing also scored seven, while little Frankie Carter paced the Tigers with 14 markers.

Coach's Worry: Bruins Getting Over-Confident?

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer
If UCLA's prodigious Bruins have trouble getting excited about their trip to Chicago this week, Coach John Wooden probably will be glad to settle for a repeat of last Saturday's let-down.

The top-ranked Bruins ran their unbeaten string to 14 games over the weekend by thrashing Portland 122-57 and California Santa Barbara 119-75.

"We let down a little Saturday," said Wooden — with a straight face.

UCLA should get stiffer arguments from Illinois and Chicago Loyola Friday and Saturday nights in the Windy City, but the ever-cautious Wooden wonders whether his young club might be taking the trip for granted.

UCLA raced to a 10-0 lead over Portland Friday night and breezed home, 7-foot-1 Lew Alcindor leading the way with 27 points. Then the Bruins wrecked

Santa Barbara's floater defense Saturday night and topped the century mark for the seventh time.

"We felt the only way to defend against them was to let one of their men go," said Santa Barbara pilot Ralph Barkey. Lucious Allen, the man most often free as the Gakhos concentrated on blanketing Alcindor, poured in 30 points, three more than Large Lew.

The Bruins meet Illinois in the nightcap of Friday night's doubleheader after Chicago Loyola and Brigham Young collided in the opener. Saturday, they try to avenge last season's 102-96 overtime loss to Loyola in part of a tripleheader that also pits Brigham Young against sixth-ranked Texas Western and Illinois against Notre Dame.

While UCLA was running up points last weekend, three other national powers — No. 2 Louisville, No. 8 Florida and No. 9 New Mexico — were running aground.

Gordon Smith's 20-foot jump shot with five seconds to play lifted Cincinnati past Louisville 59-58, tightening the Missouri Valley Conference race. The Cardinals, now 15-2 over-all, still lead the MVC with a 4-1 mark, but Wichita, 3-1, Tulsa, 2-1, Cincy, 3-2, and Bradley, 3-3, all are within range.

Tennessee, led by Ron Widby's 13 points and a tenacious defense, subdued Florida 56-42 for its second victory over the Gators in six days. The Vols, who trail first-place Vanderbilt by one-half game in the Southeastern Conference, visit Kentucky tonight while the Gators try to rebound at Georgia.

Brigham Young trimmed New Mexico 89-73, extending the Lobos losing streak to four games, as 6-foot-11 Jim Eakins scored 15 of his 21 points in the first half. The victory gave the Cougars a 4-0 Western Athletic Conference mark.

Texas Western, 12-2, humiliated Weber State 72-33 and seventh-ranked Kansas, 12-3, topped Iowa State 73-65. Third-ranked Houston, No. 4 North Carolina, No. 5 Princeton and No. 10 Providence were idle.

Unbeaten Toledo came from behind in regulation play and trimmed Villanova 72-65 in overtime for its 10th victory; once-beaten Western Kentucky ran its winning string to 14 by downing LaSalle 95-86 and Southern Illinois, the nation's top small college team, toppled Wichita 77-55.

All-America Don Carlos Smith has emerged as the Big Man on the University of Cincinnati campus.

The 6-foot-6 basketball star from Walkersville, Md., delivered a clutch basket with five seconds left Saturday that produced a 59-58 victory for the Bearcats over No. 2 ranked Louisville.

It kept Cincinnati hopes alive for a second straight Missouri Valley Conference title as the Bearcats boosted their record to 3-2 while first-place Louisville was losing its first against four triumphs.

Smith collected 14 points to pace the UC attack and was a demon on defense. He limited Louisville's heralded soph, Butch Beard, to 13 points. Beard had been averaging 23 a game.

While Cincinnati was jumping back into contention in the MVC scramble Ohio State virtually tumbled out of the Big Ten race.

Minnesota, which has never won in St. John Arena and hasn't beaten the Bucks in Columbus since 1951, rallied in the second half to upset Ohio, 67-70. Coach Fred Taylor's squad fell to 1-2 in the standings while absorbing their third straight loss.

The Gophers, soundly trounced by the Bucks earlier at Minneapolis, converted 27 of 36 free throws for the victory. Two OSU aces, Bill Hosket and Ron Sepic, both fouled out. Hosket hit 19 and Sepic 12 while Jeff Miller contributed 16 in a losing cause.

Toledo returned to action after a break for exams and promptly won its 10th in a row without a setback, a 72-65 decision over tough Villanova in overtime.

Steve Mix, hitting 11 of 14 field goals and a regulation game-tying basket, led the attack with 26 points.

The upset of the weekend came at Athens where Otterbein rallied from 14 points back to upend Ohio University 75-68. Lit-

Zane Trace Halts Plains By 82-64 Score

Bob Maxwell Zips 38 Points Through Nets for ZT Record

Bob Maxwell set a Zane Trace scoring record as the Pioneers downed The Plains of Mt. Sterling Saturday 82-64, in a game played at Kinnikinnick.

Maxwell eclipsed the old record set last year at Zane Trace by tossing in 16 field goals at a sizzling 51½ per cent accuracy rate and canning six foul shots for a 38 point total.

The old record was 33 markers by Ron Edwards.

Barry Bennett connected five times from the field and five times from the charity stripe for a 15 point total. Greg Ebert scored eight points for the Pioneers and had six assists.

In addition to his scoring effort, Maxwell had 20 rebounds in the tilt which saw the Pioneers outdistance the Blue Devils with 36 point fourth quarter.

The hosts led 19-8 at the end of the first period and 46-29 at the end of two. During the third quarter, the visitors outscored the Pioneers 22-15 and pulled within five, 56-51, as the fourth quarter began.

But it was all Zane Trace in the final period.

The Pioneers as a team hit 29 of 70 field goals for a 41½ per cent rate. The Blue Devils shot 79 times but sank only 21 field goals for a 26.23 average. At the foul line, Zane Trace converted 24 of 37 shots while the losers made good on 22 of 30.

Zane Trace is tied for second in the Ross County League with a 6-3 record. Friday, the Pioneers get a chance to take over the top spot in the league when they invade Southeastern's balliwick. Southeastern currently is the lone possessor of the RCL lead with a 6-2 record. A win for Bob Sigler's Pioneers would give them a one-half game lead.

In the preliminary tilt Saturday, the Zane Trace reserves rolled to a 62-46 win over The Plains.

The Plains
Starr, 9-4-22; Timmons, 6-4-18; S. Crable, 2-7-11; B. Crable, 1-4-6; Holland, 0-3-3; Bandy, 3-0-6. Totals, 21-24-64.

Robbie Still On Award Trail

Won't Take Credit From Teammates

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Frank Robinson, the slugging Baltimore outfielder who is collecting awards as rapidly as he did homers during the baseball season, said today that making the banquet circuit has delayed his recuperation from an operation.

"With some 20-25 dinners I haven't been able to exercise my right knee as I should," Robinson explained. "My right leg is 1½ inches smaller, around the calf and thigh, than the other one, and I need to build it up."

But, Robinson added quickly he didn't see any reason why there should be cause for alarm. "My doctors tell me that if the conditioning program they gave me is carried out," Robinson said, "I should be 100 per cent by the time spring training starts."

Robinson made the comments after winning the S. Rae Hickok Professional Athlete of the Year Award, adding to a prize collection that already includes the Most Valuable Player Award and The Associated Press' Male Athlete of the Year Award.

As for all the honors being heaped on him following his sensational 1966 season in which he won the batting triple crown in the American League while leading the Orioles to the pennant and a World Series triumph, Robinson cast himself as a stand-in for all his teammates.

"It feels great to win awards," Robinson said, "but I feel as if my teammates are being left out of it. I didn't do it all by myself. But someone has to take the bows."

Tennessee, led by Ron Widby's 13 points and a tenacious defense, subdued Florida 56-42 for its second victory over the Gators in six days. The Vols, who trail first-place Vanderbilt by one-half game in the Southeastern Conference, visit Kentucky tonight while the Gators try to rebound at Georgia.

Brigham Young trimmed New Mexico 89-73, extending the Lobos losing streak to four games, as 6-foot-11 Jim Eakins scored 15 of his 21 points in the first half. The victory gave the Cougars a 4-0 Western Athletic Conference mark.

Texas Western, 12-2, humiliated Weber State 72-38 and seventh-ranked Kansas, 12-3, topped Iowa State 73-65. Third-ranked Houston, No. 4 North Carolina, No. 5 Princeton and No. 19 Providence were idle.

Unbeaten Toledo came from behind in regulation play and trimmed Villanova 72-65 in overtime for its 10th victory; once-beaten Western Kentucky ran its winning string to 14 by downing LaSalle 95-86 and Southern Illinois, the nation's top small college team, topped Wichita 77-55.

Wilt Idle, But Still Gains Record

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sign of the times in the National Basketball Association? Bill Russell, the man who makes perennial NBA champion Boston go as a player and coach, scored his high of the season, 28 points, in helping the Celtics beat Los Angeles Sunday.

It was tough—121-120 in overtime. On the other hand, Russell's chief adversary, Wilt Chamberlain, the driving force behind Philadelphia in its effort to unseat Boston, added one to his league record of consecutive field goals made.

It was easy—He didn't even play.

When Chamberlain made 15 baskets in 15 attempts against Los Angeles last Friday night, it was announced the performance gave the star center a record of 27 straight. The streak included the last shot against Detroit Wednesday and 11 against Chicago Thursday.

"That's wrong; it's 28, said Chamberlain. "I hit the last two shots against Detroit."

Sunday, the 76ers announced that the Detroit statistician confirmed Chamberlain's claim.

In other games Sunday, St. Louis edged New York 104-101 and Chicago nipped Baltimore 118-114.

Baltimore topped Los Angeles 126-119, Cincinnati trounced Detroit 122-108 and New York beat St. Louis 24-114 in Saturday's action.

Zane Trace Halts Plains By 82-64 Score

Bob Maxwell Zips 38 Points Through Nets for ZT Record

Bob Maxwell set a Zane Trace scoring record as the Pioneers downed The Plains of Mt. Sterling Saturday 82-64, in a game played at Kinnikinnick.

Maxwell eclipsed the old record at last year at Zane Trace by tossing in 16 field goals at a sizzling 51½ per cent accuracy rate and canning six foul shots for a 38 point total.

The old record was 33 markers by Ron Edwards.

Barry Bennett connected five times from the field and five times from the charity stripe for a 15 point total. Greg Ebert scored eight points for the Pioneers and had six assists.

In addition to his scoring effort, Maxwell had 20 rebounds in the tilt which saw the Pioneers outdistance the Blue Devils with 36 point fourth quarter.

The hosts led 19-8 at the end of the first period and 46-29 at the end of two. During the third quarter, the visitors outscored the Pioneers 22-15 and pulled within five, 56-51, as the fourth quarter began.

But it was all Zane Trace in the final period.

The Pioneers as a team hit 29 of 70 field goals for a 41½ per cent rate. The Blue Devils shot 79 times but sank only 21 field goals for a 26-23 average. At the foul line, Zane Trace converted 24 of 37 shots while the losers made good on 22 of 30.

Zane Trace is tied for second in the Ross County League with a 6-3 record. Friday, the Pioneers got a chance to take over the top spot in the league when they invade Southeastern's balliwick. Southeastern currently is the lone possessor of the RCL lead with a 6-2 record. A win for Bob Sigler's Pioneers would give them a one-half game lead.

In the preliminary tilt Saturday, the Zane Trace reserves rolled to a 62-46 win over The Plains.

Robbie Still On Award Trail

Won't Take Credit From Teammates

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Frank Robinson, the slugging Baltimore outfielder who is collecting awards as rapidly as he did homers during the baseball season, said today that making the banquet circuit has delayed his recuperation from an operation.

"With some 20-25 dinners I haven't been able to exercise my right knee as I should," Robinson explained. "My right leg is 1½ inches smaller, around the calf and thigh, than the other one, and I need to build it up."

But, Robinson added quickly he didn't see any reason why there should be cause for alarm. "My doctors tell me that if the conditioning program they gave me is carried out," Robinson said, "I should be 100 per cent by the time spring training starts."

Robinson made the comments after winning the S. Rae Hickok Professional Athlete of the Year Award, adding to a prize collection that already includes the Most Valuable Player Award and The Associated Press' Male Athlete of the Year Award.

As for all the honors being heaped on him following his sensational 1966 season in which he won the batting triple crown in the American League while leading the Orioles to the pennant and a World Series triumph, Robinson cast himself as a stand-in for all his teammates.

"It feels great to win awards," Robinson said, "but I feel as if my teammates are being left out of it. I didn't do it all by myself. But someone has to take the bows."

Steering Group Resumes Effort On 'Y' Project

Activity to establish a YMCA program here has been renewed with added vigor.

A steering committee composed of volunteer members met Saturday to discuss means of promoting the program. It was one of several sessions that have been conducted the past few weeks.

The YMCA proposal was launched early last year by practically the same volunteers group that has been pushing the project recently. Several important moves were undertaken last year in the way of preliminary study.

The steering committee's next step will focus on an analysis of the community to determine interest here. They hope to have this survey completed within the next four-to-six weeks.

MEMBERS of the steering body are William Shockley, an executive at Du Pont; Robert M. Johnson, Circleville Area Chamber of Commerce president; John Jenkins, city councilman; and E. M. Hundley, a teacher interested in the "Y" program.

Shockley, serving as chairman of the committee, said numerous workers will be needed to help conduct the interest analysis. Assistance will be welcomed, he added.

An announcement last week that the Ohio National Guard is eyeing plans to sell its Armory on E. Franklin St. has provided a new phase of interest in a local YMCA program. Many observers feel the building could serve as an ideal initial "Y" headquarters.

Jenkins and other city councilmen have commented in favor of the Armory as a YMCA base of operations. However, the sale price of the building, which has not been officially set, and the ability to secure financing loom as primary factors.

According to Mayor Ben H. Gordon, Circleville would have first priority on purchasing the Armory in case the ONG decides to sell. The purposes it would serve constitute another matter, he added.

The National Guard has been studying the possibility of selling both the Armory here and the one in Lancaster and build a new one at a site somewhere between the two cities.

Today in Washington

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hugh Scott says he will introduce today a bill that would require public disclosure of the source and use of all contributions to candidates for federal elective office.

Scott said in a prepared Senate speech his bill would require members of Congress and candidates for Congress to disclose all gifts or payments they receive with a value of more than $100. His bill would apply to primaries and pre-convention spending as well as to general election expenses.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government plans to discontinue after July 1 clerical and office funds for Mrs. John F. Kennedy.

For several years after her husband's death, Mrs. Kennedy received $50,000 a year from the government to cope with massive correspondence and other business relating to the assassination. At her request, funds for the current fiscal year were cut to $30,000.

"The work at my office, although still considerable, has diminished enough so that I can personally assume the burden of my own official business," Mrs. Kennedy recently wrote President Johnson and the Bureau of the Budget.

Manchester Book Showed LBJ as Man of Violence

NEW YORK (AP) — The first chapter of the book, "The Death of a President," was tossed out at the insistence of advisers to the Kennedy family because it pictured President Johnson as "a man of violence," a source close to the family said today.

The source made the statement as the controversy over the book about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy flared anew after author William Manchester charged that Sen. Robert F. Kennedy wanted to "shred and emasculate" the book simply for political reasons.

Manchester was not immediately available for comment on the countercharge made by the source close to the Kennedy family. The author was reported on an extended vacation at an undisclosed location.

The Kennedy source said: "The whole first chapter was a deer hunting scene in Texas. It showed Johnson as a man of violence who loved to kill deer and would force others to do the same.

"It seemed to set symbolic overtones which were unjust and inaccurate. It seemed an attempt to make this (the chapter) the symbolic framework for the whole book, which was unjust and disastrous.

"It had nothing to do with the assassination since it occurred three years before the assassination, right after the election of President Kennedy. It pictured President Kennedy as a man reluctant to do this (kill deer), a much more gentle figure."

President Kennedy and Johnson went hunting on the LBJ Ranch on Nov. 17, 1960, the period after the election and prior to the inauguration. It was Kennedy's first deer hunt and he shot two bucks. The two had met at the LBJ Ranch for a post election discussion of various problems facing their administration.

It was learned that the Kennedy family and other persons close to the family felt so strongly about other passages that Manchester refused to discard that they insisted their names be deleted from the author's list of acknowledgments of persons he had contacted for vital information. This was done.

Manchester's views on the controversy came in a series of interviews with the New York Times at his home in Middletown, Conn., and with Newsweek magazine, prior to his leaving on vacation. The Times' interviews were published in today's editions. The Newsweek interview will appear in the Jan. 30 issue.

Manchester said Sen. Robert Kennedy "is surrounded by people who have hitched their wagon to his star."

"They all think in terms of another Kennedy administration," he said.

Manchester did not speculate on precisely how his book might affect Sen. Robert Kennedy. He denied that it was a diatribe against President Johnson.

He said that Theodore C. Sorensen, one of the Kennedy advisers, had advised Sen. Kennedy to file suit to block publication of the book because of his (Sen. Kennedy's) own political future. Manchester said he was told this by Sen. Kennedy.

"It all finally comes down to the fact that Mr. Manchester gave his word and then broke it," Sen. Kennedy said. "No statement or interview, or description of events, however dramatic, can alter that plain fact."

Manchester said he had no problems with the Kennedys until they learned Look magazine was paying him $665,000 for the serialization rights.

He said that when Sen. Kennedy told Mrs. John F. Kennedy, then vacationing at Hyannis Port, Mass., about the payments she "was concerned over the sum of money and what she felt was commercialization."

Manchester said that his agent predicted that his own share might be "in the area of $1.5 million." After taxes and legal expenses, Manchester said, "I may come out with something in the range of $900,000."

Richard Goodwin, an aide to the late president and Mrs. Kennedy's top adviser on the book, issued a statement in San Francisco Sunday night.

He said: "Mr. Manchester's account bears no relationship to the actual course of discussion and controversy surrounding his book. Reading it, one is struck by the enormous difficulty of answering statements made in complete disregard of the truth."

Goodwin said that when Manchester delivered his manuscript in March 1965, "The publishers wrote representatives of Goodwin's statement continued: "Mr. Manchester, the publishers wrote, had turned 'the tragedy into a magic fairy tale.'"

"In an effort to make the book both accurate and fair, to remove the sometimes horrifying and unjust implications about several individuals, the publishers and representatives of the Kennedy family recommended many changes. As a result, almost one third of the book was modified."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A clinical psychologist has brought a $110,000 defamation suit against actor Nick Adams.

Adams was served with the suit Friday during a predivorce hearing. The suit, brought, by Paul Rapp, objected to a declaration made by Adams in the divorce proceedings.

Adams had charged that his wife, actress Carol Nugent, 29, permitted Rapp to visit her home too often and allowed the psychologist to make derogatory remarks to her children about Adams.

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Ki-yoshi Togasaki, former chairman of the Japan Times in Tokyo, has been nominated for president of Rotary International for 1968-69.

If no other nominations are received from Rotary clubs by March 15, Togasaki's election will be unanimous at the club's 1967 convention in Nice, France, in May.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mickey Rooney, asking annulment of his sixth marriage, told a Superior Court judge in Los Angeles Friday that he could not pay his wife the $845 a month support she is asking.

The 45-year-old actor said he was "deeply in debt" and that Margaret Lane Rooney, also 45, whom he married last Sept. 10, was not entitled to support because they had been married only three months and 10 days before separating.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hugh Scott says he will introduce today a bill that would require public disclosure of the source and use of all contributions to candidates for federal elective office.

Scott said in a prepared Senate speech his bill would require members of Congress and candidates for Congress to disclose all gifts or payments they receive with a value of more than $100. His bill would apply to primaries and pre-convention spending as well as to general election expenses.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government plans to discontinue after July 1 clerical and office funds for Mrs. John F. Kennedy.

For several years after her husband's death, Mrs. Kennedy received $50,000 a year from the government to cope with massive correspondence and other business relating to the assassination. At her request, funds for the current fiscal year were cut to $30,000.

"The work at my office, although still considerable, has diminished enough so that I can personally assume the burden of my own official business," Mrs. Kennedy recently wrote President Johnson and the Bureau of the Budget.
